Coldest Day Of Season Predicted For District

Dip to 12 Expected In City With 5 in Suburbs; Reflecting Pool Skaters Happy

Greater Washington is due for the coldest weather of the season today when temperatures are expected to tumble to 12 in the city and 5 in the suburbs.

The same cold wave yesterday spread subzero temperatures as far south as Tennessee and brought hardship and discomfort to most of the Midwest and South and fuel oil supplies ran short in many areas.

At least 19 deaths throughout the Nation were attributed to the severe cold wave.

The snowfall which had been predicted for Washington Saturday scarcely materialized. The Weather Bureau said the snowfall in this area measured only a tenth of an inch.

Two storms which might have dropped a white blanket over Washington stalled before reaching here.

The Weather Bureau said the storm which had been expected to bring Washington from 2 to 3 inches of snow laid down a heavy line of snow west and south of Washington before dissipating. Memphis, Tenn., received 12 inches of snow from this storm.

The second storm developed off Cape Hateras but it, too, skipped by Washington as it moved westward.

Locally, the coldest temperature yesterday was in the early morning—at 8:12 a. m.—when the mercury slipped to 20. The high point was 30 at 12:18 a. m.

The coldest temperatures today will be in the early morning. During the day, which will be mostly sunny, the thermometer will go up to about 32. The coldest day thus far this year was January 15 when the mercury dropped to 13.

The predicted low temperatures virtually assure Washington of the season's first ice skating at the Lincoln Memorial Reflecting Pool.

Park Police said it was expected the ice would be thick enough for skating this morning. A thickness of 2½ inches is required before skaters are allowed on the ice of the pool. The ice measured 2 inches yesterday morning.

Edward J. Kelly, special assistant to the superintendent of National Capital Parks, explained yesterday why the ice on the reflecting pool is slower to freeze than ice at other skating areas.

The pool is lined with sheet metal. The site of the pool was once marshland. Marsh gases form under the metal and seep through, thus warming the water.

Normally the pool is filled with water so that at its deepest point the water is about 2 feet deep.

National Guard Ship Smashes Up At Andrews Field

The pilot was killed and three passengers were injured when a District National Guard C-47 Air Transport plane crashed at 1:58 p. m. yesterday while taking off at Andrews Field, Md., on a routine training flight.

Roaring down the runway, the plane suddenly veered to the right, shearing through a grove of trees, then rose about 30 feet and straddled a one-story personnel equipment building on the field.

First Lieut. John R. Brownlow, officer of the day, said force of the impact tore the two engines loose, killed the pilot instantly and hurled a woman passenger through a rear door of the fuselage.

Killed and Injured

Killed was First Lieut. Charles B. Ryerson, 28, of 824 S. Arlington Mill rd., Arlington, Va.

Lieutenant Ryerson was a veteran of 65 missions over France and Germany during the war and had been awarded the Silver Star medal.

Injured were:

Fumes from a coal-fired furnace yesterday resulted in death of an Arlington County man, John Simon, 2404 16th st. N., a certified public accountant. His wife, Mrs. Jennie Carter Simon, was overcome and taken to Arlington Hospital.

Earlier yesterday, a family doctor, called when a child became ill, saved a family of five at 6627 Piney Branch rd. nw. as coal furnace fumes seeped up into first-floor rooms. Saved was the family of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Trout. Story on Page B-1.

The Post Poll

Folk Over 60 Offer Youth Prescription

Greater Washingtonians over 60 told The Washington Post Poll their prescription for "youth" was to keep interested in outside affairs, associate with young people and live a moderate, good life.

It isn't enough to take care of your health, they believe. Only 37 per cent mentioned health precautions as important in fending off old age. Fifty per cent mentioned state of mind, outlook on life, interests and social relations as chief weapons in battling the years.

Only 3 per cent gloomily say there's nothing you can do to stay young, and one hardy lady of 81 said she liked being old because the young are so foolish.

What are the main ways, aside from years, old people differ from younger ones? Thirty-six per cent who have passed the three-score mark say old people are more experienced, settled and wiser. Twenty per cent mention a decline in physical activity and vigor. Fifteen per cent notice an increase in conservatism and foresightedness, and say they get into less trouble. In addition to a variety of other characteristics, some mention that old people are typically narrow and habit-bound, less hopeful and more resigned, less pleasure seeking, more childish and easily hurt.

In contrast, people under 60 are somewhat less impressed with the wisdom of age, and more concerned with the oldster's caution.

New U. S. Troops Criticized by Japanese Paper

Tokyo, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Newly arrived American occupation troops were criticized for their behavior in Japan today by the English language newspaper Nippon Times.

A front page article, passed by Allied censors, was the first in which a Japanese-owned newspaper dared even mildly to criticize occupation forces.

The article praised the first occupation soldiers, then went on to say the new recruits are a different brand.

"The new soldiers are smarter to look at," the writer said, "and they inspire respect, but they are as different from combat forces as a State Department career diplomat is different from Babe Ruth."

Huge Sea Sweeps Seaman Away; 2d Washes Him Back

Falmouth, England, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—A ship's steward told today how Seaman James Hoyle of Philadelphia, was swept overboard by a huge wave in mid-Atlantic, but was saved when another wave tossed him back aboard.

Hoyle was in a hospital after being brought ashore last night with a possible fractured pelvis. His ship, the John Gibbon, operated by the U. S. Maritime Commission, crept into port with a list of 45 degrees caused when its cargo of coal shifted under the pounding of heavy seas.

Steward Maurice Burnstein said he saw a wave sweep Hoyle and another seaman working on the forward deck into the ocean.

"The skipper was in his cabin shaving," Burnstein said. "He dashed out, ordered full speed astern, and slewed the ship around. Hoyle came up on the crest of a wave, and was washed on board and thrown against the winch."

The second man was rescued with a life ring.

Store Sales In 1947 Reach 118 Billions

Lower Food Prices Are Predicted in Commerce Report

Retail store sales last year set a new high of 118 billion dollars, the Commerce Department said yesterday, despite rising prices and spotty distribution.

At the same time, the department forecast the approach of declining food prices while eating standards remain higher than before the war.

Last year's top in retail sales was 18 billions more than the 100 billion dollars spent by consumers in 1946, the department said in its monthly business survey. Higher prices, it explained, accounted for a "major part" of the increase, and warned that the recent 20 per cent freight rate increase would "have widespread price consequences."

Food Prediction Explained

Although the department set no time for its predicted decline in food prices and limited its forecast to a "probability," it gave reasons for its optimism. These were:

1. Even though prices were climbing, there was better distribution of goods, particularly of "durable" goods. As a result, people bought more automobiles and electrical appliances and fewer "nondurables," such as clothing, accounting for a 33 per cent rise in

Foreign Food Aid Held Vital To Prosperity

Anderson Stresses Strong American Export Program

His Annual Report

The European Recovery Program, with continuing world food relief and other American activities in world affairs are necessary to the Nation's prosperity, Secretary of Agriculture Anderson asserted yesterday in his annual report.

Although large production and prices "some 20 per cent above those of the previous year gave the farmers unexampled prosperity," he wrote, "the farmers could not take a wholly optimistic view of their position."

The reason, Anderson asserted, is "because the export demand of the years immediately ahead will depend so largely upon American financing."

Continued prosperity for American farmers, he indicated, depends upon this country maintaining a strong export program. "If we continue to fill our place in the world economy instead of pulling out of it as we did 30 years ago, the chance of avoiding major depression will be better."

Under ordinary peacetime conditions, he said, the agricultural situation that prevailed during last year would have been as favorable as any on record.

Taft Urges Independent Aid Director

Republican Leader Wants 'Hard-Boiled' Administrator With Cabinet Rank

By Marshall Andrews
Post Reporter

Senator Taft (R., Ohio) demanded yesterday that a "hard boiled" administrator with Cabinet rank be appointed to manage the European Recovery Plan.

His proposal, made in a Chicago radio round table program, coincided with grwoing demands in the House Foreign Affairs Committee that any recovery plan be tied to a guarantee of strategic materials in return from recipient nations. The aid bill as written contained a provision that the United States be granted priority in the purchase of these materials.

Taft declared that the State Department should not be given "complete control" of the recovery plan but that it should be administered by an independent officer able to judge it effects on the American economy. Therefore, he added, the "administrator ought to be in the Cabinet and sit with the President, and the Secretaries of State, Commerce and Agriculture on an equal basis."

Baruch May Appear Today

These developments came on the eve of receipt by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee of testimony for the first time by private citizens. Bernard M. Baruch and former President Herbert Hoover were prepared to go before the committee with conditional indorsement of the recovery measure.

The 77-year-old Baruch was scheduled to testify today and if he appears would be the first witness not a Government official committed to the program. While he has given no public indication of his views, he is understood to be concerned about the impact of the 17 billion dollar four-year plan on the American economy, already strained by inflation.

He was expected to warn that no solution is possible except increased production in farms and in factories. He might renew his plea for a standard work week longer than the present 40 hours and was expected to stress the need for a general belt tightening among Americans to reduce the pressure of domestic demands on available supplies.

Hoover Presents Views

Mr. Hoover, vacationing in Florida, was reported to have informed Chairman Vandenberg (R., Mich.) of the committee that he was willing to appear and testify when he returned to Washington. At Vandenberg's request, meanwhile, he outlined his views in a letter which may be made public this week.

The former President was said to favor the program with two important reservations:

1. That German factories must be rebuilt as the key to overall European recovery.

2. That a new agency be set up to administer the program, connected with the State Department but not within its framework.

The House committee will continue hearing from Lewis Douglas, Ambassador to Great Britain,

Emphasis On Military Is Deplored

By the United Press

Prof. Albert Einstein and 20 other educators, clergymen and prominent public figures yesterday issued a warning that "America cannot remain democratic if the present trend toward military control of our institutions continues."

They asserted that military men have lately acquired a "dangerous" degree of influence over American foreign policy, public opinion, higher education, scientific research, and even the Boy Scouts.

They read in this connection a long roll call of military men recently appointed to high Government posts normally held by civilians, and cited examples of what they called "the influence which the military idea has in the President's thinking."

High on the list were Secretary of State George C. Marshall and Admiral William D. Leahy, the President's personal Chief of Staff.

Pointing to the "militarized states" which arose in Japan and Germany when civilian control of national policy was undermined, the group said:

"The same pattern already exists in large measure in our own land."

The assertions were made in a 32-page booklet entitled "The Militarization of America," distributed here by the National Council Against Conscription.

Signers of the report, in addition to Einstein, include Ray Lyman Wilbur, former Secretary of the Interior, now chancellor of Stanford University; William J.

Arab, Jewish Fights Kill 15 In Holy Land

33 More Wounded In Battles Between Tel Aviv and Jaffa

Jerusalem, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Fifteen persons have been reported killed and at least 33 wounded in battles between Arabs and two Jewish Haganah "punitive expeditions" between Tel Aviv and Jaffa and southeast of Jerusalem, unofficial sources said tonight.

Arabs reported that about 100 Haganah "troops" were still fighting nearly 24 hours after they attacked the Arab villages of Zacharia, Bet Netif and Deraban, in the Hebron Hills below Jerusalem. According to the Arabs, six Jews and four Arabs had been killed and a total of 20 or more wounded on both sides.

When the Jews attacked the villages last night, they reportedly were under orders to kill two Arabs for every one of 35 Haganah men the Arabs ambushed and wiped out along a camel trail in the Hebron Hills Friday night.

One of the 35 Jews the Arabs ambushed was Moshe Perlstein of Brooklyn, N. Y., the first Jewish American killed in the partition fighting.

Arabs ambushed a Jewish convoy as it passed through Abu Ghosh about six miles from Jerusalem and killed one Jew and wounded seven others seriously. One Jew was reported still missing.

Arabs reported that a Yemenite (Oriental-type) Jew was killed near Jerusalem's Jaffa gate last night when he was discovered posing as an Arab.

Compromise Move

By The Associated Press

Some influential Senate Democrats were reported yesterday to be ready to join in an attempt to override an expected presidential veto if Republicans agree to limit to $3,500,000,000 a proposed cut in income taxes.

Although Senator Edwin C. Johnson (D., Colo.) was the only one who indicated publicly his support of such a move, some other Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee talked privately of such a compromise.

In the House, Chairman Knutson (R., Minn.) is plugging for a $5,600,000,000 cut in income taxes. However, another House Republican leader reported over the weekend that a move is developing to hold the reduction to a little more than 4 billion dollars.

Veto Proof, Knutson Says

Speaker Martin (R., Mass.) predicted the House will pass a tax-cutting bill this month, without saying how much, and said whatever its final form, it will survive a veto. Knutson claims his own bill is "veto proof."

The story is different in the Senate, however, where Republican leaders have said privately they fear they can't marshal the votes to override the veto with which Mr. Truman is certain to greet any such drastic slash in Federal revenues. The President himself has proposed a $40 per person cost of living cut in income taxes, to be offset by a $3,200,000,000 boost in corporation levies so there will be no drop in the Government's income.

Await House Action

Chairman Taft (Ohio) of the Senate Republican policy committee and Chairman Millikin (R., Colo.) of the Finance Committee said they want to see what the House does with the Knutson bill before they make any decision on the amount involved.

Taft indicated clearly he hopes that when it finally is approved by Congress, the bill will be in such form that it can attract sufficient Democratic, as well as Republican, votes to register the two thirds necessary to override a veto.

Johnson told a reporter that he is flatly opposed to the President's $40 per person plan. "I will support the Knutson bill," he said.

Although he would not comment publicly, Senator George (D., Ga.) was quoted by friends as being willing to go along with a $3,500,000,000 cut, but believing the Knutson figure too high.

Senator Byrd (D., Va.) told a

Priest Criticizes Owners' Fairlington Strike Stand

A Catholic priest yesterday criticized refusal of the Fairmac Corp., owners of Fairlington, to negotiate with striking AFL maintenance employes.

The Rev. Martin T. Quinn, pastor of the Blessed Sacrament Church, which serves 1100 Fairlington families, said:

"I don't think this corporation has any right to refuse to deal with the union."

He termed the firm's rejection of collective bargaining the "denial of a democratic American moral principle."

The company first refused to bargain on a plea by the union, and later rejected a similar request made by the Arlington County Board and a group of four clergymen.

The clergymen, in the interests of "peace and amity," several weeks ago approached both union and management to determine their positions in the 42-day dispute. They conferred with William Ziegler, general manager of Fairmac.

Father Quinn said that in the conference with Fairmav officials the management tried to "divert us from the principle of collective bargaining by giving us over and over again the doings of the strikers." He ... d "We told them

Greeks Squabble, Leave Job to U. S.

Intrigues Continue In Disregard of American Opinion

By Homer Bigart
Copyright, 1948, N. Y. Herald Tribune

Athens, Jan. 18 (NYHT).—With remarkable disregard for the effect on American public opinion during the weeks preceding congressional action on the Marshall Plan, the Greek government, seemingly cocksure of an increased flow of American dollars, continues to fritter away energy in political squabbles and intrigues ruinous to national morale.

Athens politicians have the fixed idea that the United States is irrevocably committed to solving the Greek dilemma. They see no reason why they should not continue politicking as usual.

In spite of the American aide memoire warning the Greek cabinet against partisan maneuvers, the coalition government barely hangs together from one day to the next. Its most glaring weakness is the irreconcilable distrust and hatred between Premier Themistokles Sophoulis, Liberal Party leader, and Vice Premier Constantin Tsaldaris, Populist (extreme right) leader.

Tsaldaris reportedly has been seeking the removal of Maj. Gen. Constantin Ventiris, commander of the First Army, on the ground that he failed to send sufficient reinforcements to the Eighth Mountain Division in the recent battle of Konitsa. Rightists have been trying to replace General Ventiris by Gen. Alexander Papagos, former chief of the general staff during the Metaxas dictatorship and now military adviser to King Paul.

Such a move would strengthen the royalists and perhaps pave the way for a dictatorship under Papagos, if the Americans became disgusted with the present government and began casting about for a strong man with whom to deal.

Last night Ventiris came to Athens from his headquarters at Volos and presented his resignation to Premier Sophoulis, who refused to accept it.

Another row centers about Constantin Rendis, Liberal Minister of Public Order, under fire for failing to take harsher measures against Communists. A royalist attack against Rendis in Parliament was postponed today after Premier Sophoulis told Tsaldaris he would support Rendis even if it meant the collapse of the cabinet.

Greeks Repel 1500 Guerillas at Platonos

Athens, Jan. 18 (AP).—Greek army troops defending Platonos, repelled a series of guerilla attacks in hand-to-hand fighting today as advanced elements of an army relief column entered the fight, front advices said.

The Athens government forces are using planes, tanks and artillery against the guerilla force. The insurgents are estimated to have 1500 men involved in the battle which has raged for two days in south central Greece, 20 miles north of Patras.

The relief force was en route from Agrinion, 20 miles west of the battle area. Its forward elements made initial contact with the guerillas during the night after crossing the Evinos River from Thermos, accounts reaching Athens said.

Guerilla units were said to have made their main attack on Platonos from heights which dominate the town from the south.

Diversionary attacks were made by the insurgents on Thermos, Prostova and Ano Christovista. The guerillas also attempted to dynamite three bridges over the Evinos River to hamper the movement of the army relief column.

Maj. Gen. Constantine Papadopoulos, commander of the First Army Corps and a veteran of two years fighting against the guerillas, was in personal command of the Athens forces.

Soviet Grain Exports at Prewar Level

United States foreign crop experts reported yesterday Soviet Russia had developed "a significant grain export program."

The Agriculture Department said Soviet production of wheat, rye, corn, barley and oats in 1947 still was about one fifth below prewar.

"Nevertheless, compulsory deliveries (by Russian farmers) to the Soviet government, from which exports originate under the Soviet state monopoly, were reported as equal to the best prewar years," it added.

The office said the Soviet government already has exported, or is committed to export, 2,367,000 long tons of grain. This exceeds the average annual Soviet shipment during the period between the two world wars.

It compares with the 12,100,000 long tons of breadgrains and 1,900,000 long tons of coarse grains which the United States has set as its export goal for the 1947-48 crop year ending next June 30.

ketings, the highest on record, amounted to nearly 30 billion dollars.

"Farmers' assets in land, buildings, livestock, equipment and savings were at the highest level on record. The equity of farm operators in the agricultural plant or the value of assets not offset by debts was up 113 per cent from 1940.

Farm debt, though slightly greater than in 1946, was relatively low.

But, he added, "because agriculture abroad will eventually recover from the damage inflicted by the war, farmers in this country need assurance, not yet available, of permanently high domestic employment along with a large commercially financed export trade."

Agriculture, he said, can maintain its prosperity "only through a national economic policy that will maintain abundance in every phase of our economic life."

Support Minor Factor

Price supports for farm products, Anderson observed, influenced the 1947 level of prices only slightly. Purchases for price-support purposes during the first half of the year were limited to potatoes, eggs, dry milk solids and turkeys.

The market prices of some agricultural commodities, owing to the strength of the demand at home and abroad, were from 30 to 50 per cent above announced price-support levels. Market prices for agricultural products in the January-June period averaged 120 per cent of parity. Price supports were fixed at 90 per cent of parity—except for cotton which is 92½ per cent.

Anderson predicted that "the United States may eventually have wheat surplus problems again; but it probably will play an active role in the export market for some time since the world food emergency shows no sign of terminating soon."

He also predicted that "eventually American cotton will again meet increasing competition from foreign cotton."

Cotton can meet this challenge, he said, "only through a many-sided program of research, efficiency in production and wise policy in regard to the domestic and foreign competition."

The Senate-House Legislative Budget Committee, created by the Congressional Reorganization Act, which meets today, is supposed to set a budget ceiling by February 15.

On the committee's final decision will depend in large measure the amount of foreign aid to be voted by Congress and the amount of tax reduction to be made.

A definite position on taxes is expected to be reached by House Republican chieftains at a meeting tomorrow of the House GOP Steering Committee, which shapes party policy.

While taxes will hold the center of interest at the meeting, the committee is expected also to discuss universal military training legislation, the foreign aid program and rent control.

Pending the decisions of party leaders, both Senate and House will mark time during the coming week, with no major legislation on the docket of either branch.

Hearings on the Marshall Plan to help economic recovery in non-Communist Europe will be resumed by both the Senate and the House Foreign Committees, with no termination date in sight.

who already has been questioned about establishing some guarantee of receiving strategic materials in return for loans. Douglas has told the committee the priorities principle laid down in the original bill should be adhered to, since many European countries were depending upon sales of these materials to build up their short supplies of dollars.

Nevertheless, several members of the committee, Republicans and Democrats, have swung to the view of Representative Richards (D., S. C.) that repayment of loans with strategic materials be tied hard and fast to aid provisions.

Informed observers pointed out yesterday that the most effective support of the aid program came last week from three witnesses who were not directly connected with it. These were Secretary of Agriculture Anderson, Secretary of Defense Forrestal and John J. McCloy, president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

Anderson, it was pointed out, cleared up many misapprehensions about what the recovery program might do to domestic food supplies and prices.

Forrestal Stresses Alternatives

Forrestal made it clear what would happen if the program were not adopted, predicting in that event a costly and necessary increase in preparations for defense.

McCloy showed how many lessons learned by the International Bank could be applied to operation of a recovery plan so as to bring about increased economy and efficiency.

While these views have been presented to members of committees, there still remain some 450 members of Congress who may never receive more than a sketchy idea of what they contain. The problem of reaching this vast majority of those who ultimately will vote on the measure was held to be the most formidable faced by its supporters.

Pro-Tito Pastor Says Film Slanders Soviets

New York, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—The National Council of American-Soviet Friendship today asked 20th Century-Fox to withdraw its forthcoming picture, "The Iron Curtain," because it "slanders the Russian people."

Chairman of the Council, Rev. William H. Melish, the Brooklyn pastor who visited Yugoslavia and reported approvingly on Marshal Tito and his country, termed the film a flagrant violation of the United Nations resolution against war propaganda.

Reds Report Five-Year Plan Output Gains

Moscow, Jan. 18 (AP).—The State Planning Commission reported to the Russian people today that industry and agriculture in the Soviet Union are at prewar levels as a result of goals achieved in the first two years of the current five-year plan.

The record of progress during the past year was marred by failure of certain branches of the economy to meet production quotas—among them the coal and automobile industries. But even in the case of coal and other branches which failed to achieve goals, production increases were reported over 1946.

(The report followed the customary Soviet practice of giving only percentage comparisons with the previous year and containing no figures on actual production.)

More Wheat Available

The marked increase in agricultural output was seen as enabling the Russians to fulfill international agreements for supplying wheat and other grains to European countries and possibly increase such commitments next year.

The heaviest increases of major industrial products were registered for farm machinery, heavy transport and steam turbines.

"In the fourth quarter of 1947 industrial output reached the average quarterly level of the prewar year of 1940," the report added. The gross output increased by 22 per cent over 1946.

Grain production was cited as 58 per cent above 1946, and the report said "in 1947 the harvest of grain crops reached the prewar level." Gross agricultural production was 48 per cent higher than 1946.

Industrial goals were not achieved in the Ukraine nor the Karelo-Finnish Republic, the report noted. The Karelian area missed its target by 14 per cent, while the Ukraine was only 1 per cent off. Other production figures ranged from 102 per cent in White Russia to 117 per cent in Latvia.

Coal production missed the goal despite a 12 per cent increase over 1946.

Increases Over 1946

These instances were balanced by reports of such increases as these in other fields, compared to 1946:

Spinning machinery, 163 per cent; tractors, 109; agricultural machinery, 106; railway locomotives, 177; automobiles, 30; steel, 9; zinc, 16; automobile tires, 49; cotton fabrics, 33; sugar, 110; cotton, 21; potatoes, 30; sugar beets, 190; flax fiber, 29; hemp fiber, 78; sunflower seed, a basic source of vegetable oils, 79.

Winter grain sowings last fall were announced as 3,500,000 hectares (8,648,500 acres) more than in the autumn of 1946.

Other statements in the report included:

Employment rose by "nearly" 1,200,000 and labor productivity decreased by 13 per cent. Total wages and salaries increased 23 per cent over 1946.

State and local Soviet institutions built or restored about nine million square meters of living floor space and "individual citizens using savings earned by their own labor" built additional houses with four million square meters of floor space.

War Secrets Of U. S. Held In Plain View

By The Associated Press

Some of the United States' most highly prized secrets may be viewed by any espionage agent who takes the trouble to buy a travel ticket, military security authorities said yesterday.

They indorsed President Truman's order to ban flying over atom plants as one move to patch present-day loopholes in secrecy curtains which in wartime shrouded all military and naval installations. But at the same time they noted that some secrets (except atomic) now may be far from secure because of the general postwar relaxation of regulations. The officials asked not to be quoted by name.

Army and Navy men said there are a few of their zones subject to restrictions such as the presidential order applies to atomic plants, but that they are exceptions. During the war virtually all installations, including supply dumps and port areas, were either declared off-limits for commercial aircraft or the planes' window curtains were drawn when such areas were approached.

The postwar situation is different. This is one example cited:

A military project intended to be of a high order of secrecy is being constructed directly under the approach path for aircraft to a long-established commerical airport. Plane passengers look down directly upon workings rated as "top secret" under military regulations.

Nor is the problem of aircraft the only one. Airplane and ordnance plants are located along public highways and railroads. Planes, guns and vehicles in highly "classified" categories stand in parking areas or are operated within sight of these public highways.

Indonesians Look to U. S. In Plebiscite

Batavia, Java, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—The Indonesian Republic is counting on the United States and the United Nations to ensure the fairness of the forthcoming plebiscite which will determine the fate of these troubled islands, Prime Minister Amir Sjahriffudin said today.

In his first interview since the signing of a truce with the Netherlands yesterday, Sjahriffudin said:

"Tell the American people that we count upon them to ensure a fair plebiscite here. The plebiscite will chart the future destiny of a people. It is a big test for the United Nations, and the American people as one of the leaders of the United Nations must maintain their interest."

Expressing "deep and lasting gratitude" for the work of the U. N. good-offices committee that effected the settlement ending nearly two years of warfare between the Dutch and the Indonesian Republic, he added:

"The Dutch can no longer contend that the Indonesian question is an internal matter. They have accepted mediation. The plebiscite is of world interest and its success will be a fine example to the world in strengthening the United Nations."

Sjahriffudin said the republic will immediately start its political campaign with speeches and leaflets informing the people of the plebiscite.

Anti-British Riots Laid to Soong's Foes

Canton, China, Jan. 18 (AP).—Opponents of T. V. Soong, governor of Kwangtung province, fomented the riot in which the British consulate and a half dozen other buildings were burned and six Britons were battered, a high-placed American source said today.

Americans and British alike scoffed at official Chinese attempts to blame Friday's violent outbreak on the Communists.

As Chinese authorities vainly attempted to hush up the incident and forbade local papers to carry pictures or any but official versions, both the American and British consuls general said they had received no explanation or excuse why the riot was allowed to continue unchecked for three hours.

Governor Soong, former premier of China and brother-in-law of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek, blamed "Communist agitators," but the American source, saying Soong's Chinese opponents were at the bottom of it, commented:

"The Chinese Reds are vehemently anti-American but not anti-British. This apparently well-planned and scheduled demonstration was directed exclusively against British, not Americans."

He said rioters carrying cans of kerosene-soaked cotton threatened the American Texaco building, but left with cheers when employes flourished the Stars and Stripes.

"If those were Communists, they certainly would not have cheered the American flag," he said.

He said the mob also started to break into a residence but cheered and desisted when a servant identified the place as American.

The reason for the riot, at least ostensibly, was the British attempt during the past fortnight to evict Chinese squatters from a shacktown on Kowloon, colonial leased territory on the mainland opposite the British colony of Hangkong, a little more than 100 miles from Canton.

The American source gave this explanation of the resulting Canton affair:

"Chinese newspaper men, already vexed at the evictions, were called early in the week by Governor Soong to a news conference where Soong's secretary read the British Reuters Agency account of the Kowloon affair.

"The newspaper men were displeased with Soong because the governor ordered no news on provincial government affairs could be given out except by his secretary.

"They agreed to rebuff Soong, and at the same time filled their news columns with blasts at the British and against the Chinese government for failing to do something.

"An anti-Soong clique in both the Canton municipal and Kwangtung provincial governments helped increase the tension, aroused sentiment against the British, and sent speakers to universities.

Addresses Throng Of Followers From His Bed on Porch

New Delhi, India, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Mohandas K. Gandhi ended his fast "unto glorious death" today after receiving pledges that India would work for peace with Pakistan.

Gandhi said that he now hoped to live the 125 to 133 years which "learned opinion" estimated to be his span of life.

Weak to the point of fatal collapse, according to his doctors, Gandhi broke his fast against Hindu-Moslem enmity after 122 hours 2 minutes, at 12:30 p. m.

He was so weak at the end that one of his physicians had to lift him from his bed so that he could take his first food—a glass of sweetened lemon juice. From the hour when he started his fast at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday he had weakened steadily. At the end nausea had set in. His kidneys had been affected—possibly permanently—and stomach pains had alarmed his medical attendants.

But so remarkable are the recuperative powers of the emaciated 78-year-old Gandhi that a few hours later he was able to address a gathering of his followers from a bed on the porch of his villa.

Hindu and Sikh leaders agreed to the following Gandhi peace program:

(1) Moslems will be permitted to hold their annual religious fair at nearby Mersuli; (2) Delhi Moslems who fled to Pakistan will be permitted to return; (3) Moslem mosques converted to Hindu temples will be restored; (4) Delhi will be made safe for Moslems; (5) Moslems will be guaranteed safety on railroads; (6) the economic boycott against Moslems will be lifted; (7) remaining Moslem districts here will be protected.

Gandhi said that his appeal for peace has been answered beyond his expectations.

Three-Nation Team Proposed In Plan to Settle India Strife

New York, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—A three-nation United Nations mediation team to settle the strife in Kashmire was proposed to India and Pakistan today at a private conciliation conference ordered by the U. N. Security Council.

Authoritative sources revealed that the proposal was laid before representatives of the feuding Moslem and Hindu states by Fernand van Langenhove of Belgium, president of the Security Council and mediator, at a weekend series of behind-the-scenes negotiations between India and Pakistan.

The sources said Pakistan indicated "a willingness" to accept the plan and India asked for time to consider it and report back at a later closed meeting this evening or tomorrow.

Situation More Hopeful!

Buoyed slightly by hopeful news from New Delhi, where Mohandas K. Gandhi has broken his fast in return for a promise of Moslem-Hindu amity, representatives of the two dominions and Van Langehove sat down for the first of their series of weekend huddles yesterday. They met again this morning to hear the Belgian's proposal.

His suggestion, patterned after the U. N. "Good Offices" Commission which finally won a truce yesterday between warring forces of the Indonesian Republic and the Netherlands in Java and Sumatra, was as follows:

1. The Security Council should establish a mediation commission with one of its members chosen by India, the second by Pakistan and the third—the chairman—selected by the first two members. All three would be chosen from among the 57 U. N. countries.

Would Go to Scene

2. The commission should travel to the scene of the bloody fighting between Moslem invaders and Kashmir tribesmen, on the one hand, and troops of the Indian army and the princely Kashmir army on the other hand.

3. It should try to "smooth over" differences which have led to the bloodshed, including conflicting Indian and Pakistan claims over which state Kashmir should join and the dispute over when and how to conduct a plebiscite among Kashmir's four million residents on their future status. (Kashmir's ruler has chosen to accede to India under the partition program, but the final status has been left to a still-to-be-arranged plebiscite.)

4. During on-the-spot mediation efforts, the Security Council could be free to take any additional measures it believes necessary to put down the rouble and mend relations between the newly independent states.

Benes to Remain President Until Czech Election

Prague, Jan. 18 (AP).—President Eduard Benes is ailing but determined to remain in office until the Nation holds its first postwar constitutional election, informed sources said today.

Benes, suffering from arteriosclerosis, is working hard at his tasks. His health has improved since last autumn, when political leaders informally discussed possible candidates to succeed him in an emergency. He avoids public functions, and Mrs. Benes represents him.

It is generally agreed here that the interparty strife which characterizes the National Front coalition and the continuing bid by Communists for power would be even more bitter if Benes were not in the presidential palace to utter calming words.

Formerly a member of the Czech National Socialist Party, he is now a nonparty man, and no criticism of him is written or voiced, even in the extreme leftist press.

Red Dominated Taranto Hails Friendship Train

Taranto, Italy, Jan. 18 (AP).—Taranto's leftist-dominated city administration had a change of heart and helped welcome an American Friendship Train today.

Last week Communists and Socialists in the council voted against official greetings, as a sign of protest over the sending of marines to United States warships in the Mediterranean. However, everybody turned out to cheer the arrival of five carloads of food contributed by Americans.

Bradley Sees Bar to Peace In Irresponsive Government

New York, Jan. 18 (NYHT).—An enduring peace can be assured only when all governments of the world reflect the will and respect the rights of their people, Gen. Omar N. Bradley declared tonight at the concluding session of the forty-first annual meeting of the American Jewish Committee.

General Bradley, who will succeed Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower next month as Chief of Staff of the Army, spoke at a symposium on civil liberties. Other speakers were Attorney General Tom C. Clark, James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, and Joseph M. Proskauer, president of the AJC.

Without using the words "Communism" or "Soviet Union," General Bradley said that any form of government employing censorship and police power cannot avoid being suspected of duplicity, and that any nation where "men must submit their dignity and conscience to the authority of the state" endangers the free peoples of the world.

"An enduring peace," he said, "can be nothing less than an accord which places human welfare before even national sovereignty. And it cannot be assured until governments reflect the good will of their people and until their people show honest respect for the human rights of each other."

Without mentioning the Marshall Plan by name, General Bradley said: "At a time when free people need help in their effort to survive . . . we dare not neglect the threat that starvation poses to their civil liberties. . . . We court disaster if we respond with too little or too late."

Asserting that the American people have entrusted their civil liberties to the armed forces for safekeeping, General Bradley defended military authority in the United States as fair, intelligent and judicious.

He contended that the armed forces must be freed from the stigma associated with the phrase "military mind." Men cannot be induced to become soldiers, he said, "if in the process they are divested of their dignity and human rights." He suggested that no civilian agency has offered "more faithful stewardship" than the the armed forces "with sparser remuneration and scantier thanks."

U. S. Reported Asking Hungary For Seizure Facts

By The Associated Press

The United States is understood to have demanded an explanation from Hungary of the seizure by Russian troops on Hungarian soil last week of two properly accredited assistant military attaches at the American Legation in Budapest.

On the nature of the response probably will depend a decision by the State Department as to whether a protest should be filed with the Hungarian government and also whether a denunciation of the Russian troops' action should be delivered to Russia.

The two men, Lieut. Col. Peter J. Kopcsak and Lieut. Col. Bernard Thielen, were arrested by the Russians at Papa, taken to Austria, questioned by Soviet occupation authorities in Vienna and finally released there. Officials here said they were equipped with proper diplomatic identity cards which entitled them to travel freely inside Hungary.

U. S. Military 'Trend' Hit

Miller, S. J., president of the University of Detroit; Reuben Gustavson, president of the University of Nebraska; Edwin T. Dahlberg, president of the Northern Baptist Convention; Arthur Morgan, former TVA chairman; Dorothy Canfield Fisher and Cord Meyer, jr., authors.

The report did not directly oppose the universal military training program which President Truman has asked Congress to enact at this session—although he did not use the term "military. But the signers said of UMT:

"The Army is planning for even greater military control over the American people . . . Universal military training would tend further to eliminate the healthy criticism which civilians have heretofore made of the military (because) very few men with military training oppose the will of their former commanders."

(The universal training program recommended last year by a presidential commission of distinguished private citizens was indorsed meanwhile by Dr. Frank Diehl Fackenthal, acting president of Columbia University. His indorsement was reported by the National Security Committee, headed by former Supreme Court Justice Owen J. Roberts, which had previously reported 21 other leading college presidents in favor of UMT.)

Einstein and his fellow signers noted that the historian, Arnold J. Toynbee, in his widely acclaimed "Study of History," came to the conclusion that militarism "has been by far the commonest cause of the breakdown of civilization."

Cite State Department

Extensively documenting their charge that "military men are moving into key positions in Government," especially the State Department, the authors of the report said:

"The two most influential men in the Government are Adm. William D. Leahy, President Truman's personal aide, and Gen. George C. Marshall, Secretary of State. Gen. Marshall's assistant is Brig. Gen. Marshall S. Carter. The Assistant Secretary of State, John E. Puerifoy, is a West Point graduate. Lieut. Gen. Lucius D. Clay is military governor of the American zone in Germany, and Gen. MacArthur is in control in Japan. The Ambassador to Russia is Lieut. Gen. Walter Bedell Smith . . . a number of other key positions in the State Department are occupied by military men."

"The conduct of foreign policy by military men leaves much to be desired," the report said. "General Marshall conducts his foreign policy as a soldier would do in dealing with an enemy."

The Senate Armed Services Committee rebelled last week against President Truman's request for a special bill that would enable Maj. Gen. Laurence Kuter to take over the chairmanship of the Civil Aeronautics Board. Chairman Chany Gurney (R., N. Dak.) complained that too many military men were getting control of civilian jobs. But when Mr. Truman protested that the committee had done the Nation "a disservice," Gurney said his group would reconsider its action.

The bill would allow Kuter to keep his military status and pay while serving in a civilian capacity. Kuter said he would turn the post down rather than sacrifice his Army connection.

Military control over a large part of the Nation's scientific research has been brought about, it said, through the fact that most of the Federal funds appropriated for research are earmarked for the Armed Forces. The group charged that President Truman effectively kept the situation that way when he vetoed last summer a bill to set up a national science foundation. (Mr. Truman said the foundation, as outlined in the bill, would be "administratively unworkable.")

Military influence over high school and college education was attributed to the expanding Army and Navy ROTC programs.

Hit Air Scout Program

The charge that "the military influence also has spread to the Boy Scouts of America" was supported by reports of 12 Air Force officers being detailed to help develop the "Air Scout Program."

The signers expressed particular concern over Army "public relations" policy. They said that in 1946, more than 1300 uniformed soldiers were assigned full time to the job of wooing a favorable press and public opinion.

"The Army today manages to get a lot of favorable publicity in the Nation's press," the report said, "and very little which is critical of Army policy . . . Moreover, the Army was third largest advertiser in the Nation in 1946."

Censorship Hinted

The report said military leaders "have been preparing a peacetime censorship" of the press, but added that "full details" have not yet been announced.

The report also charged that the Army maintains "an extensive lobby" in Congress, and quoted Representative Albert J. Engle (R., Mich.) as saying that military efforts to influence votes on legislation are "downright vicious."

It asserted that the Army had made a particularly strong effort to win public and congressional approval of universal military training.

(A House Executive Expenditures Subcommittee, headed by Representative Forest A. Harness (R., Ind.) has accused the Army Department of illegally spending public money to "propagandize" for universal training. Army Secretary Kenneth C. Royall told the committee last week, however, that he believed the Army was simply performing its duty to keep the public informed of defense plans.)

CIO Predicts Block Workers Will Help Swing Elections

By The Associated Press

The CIO's Political Action Committee predicted yesterday that its "Victory Army" of PAC block workers is going "to help elect a Congress that will do something about high prices, housing and the Taft-Hartley Act."

These block workers were assigned to visit their neighbors to build up understanding of how unions work and "the issues that affect us all."

"Try to be helpful—but not nosey," the workers were advised in a pamphlet. "Be a real neighbor and friend."

The PAC said that in this election year there will be hundreds of thousands of PAC block workers "working to make America a free, happy and prosperous land."

In another get-out-the-vote statement, Oren Root, jr., of the executive committee of the American Veterans Committee, urged that all AVC members support an effort to get veterans to the polls this year.

Root said:

"The progressive principles for which AVC stands are having tough sledding these days. The only place where the tide which is running against those principles can be turned is in the individual polling booth."

Steel Group Named To Fight Inflation

23 Producers to Advise on Allocation In Major Test of Republican Measure

By The Associated Press

Steel's share in fighting spiraling costs was placed in the hands of 23 big producers yesterday and thus shaped a major test for the Republican anti-inflation law.

Secretary of Commerce Harriman, acting under the law, appointed the steel men to an advisory committee to supervise this key industry's voluntary allocation program. They will consider agreements to carry out the law aimed at controlling inflationary forces.

Group Meets January 30

The committee will meet here January 30 to begin working out a system of sharing scarce steel supplies with essential users. Although steelmaking operations rose last week to 98 per cent of capacity, the highest since 1944, increased production has not been able to meet mounting demands.

Prior to the convening of the steel producers, three other related meetings are scheduled. These are:

1. Representatives of the farm implements industry will meet with Commerce officials January 27. Although a peacetime production mark of $1,200,000,000 was set last year, even greater output is in prospect for 1948, with increased needs for steel.

Freight Car Needs

2. The Office of Defense Transportation summoned its steel industry committe to met January 27 or 28 to discuss the freight car situation. A Senate Interstate Commerce Subcommitte reported Saturday that construction of 10,000 freight cars a month for at least two years is needed to relieve the shortage.

3. A petroleum advisory committee set a meeting next Wednesday to go into the voluntary allocation problem on both an immediate and long range basis. The Commerce Department reported over the weekend that this 14-billion-dollar industry will have to embark on a tremendous expansion program to meet increased demands.

Patuxent P-TA to Meet

The Frank Knox School, Navy-owned and county-operated elementary school at Patuxent River, Md., will be examined at a meeting of its Parent-Teacher Association Wednesday at 8 p. m. Representatives of the county and of the Navy will discuss the part each plays in administration of the school.

Pinecrest P-TA to Meet

Methods of supplying medical assistance for Montgomery County school children will be discussed at a meeting of the Pinecrest Parent-Teacher Association tomorrow at 8::1:5 p. m. at the school, Woodmoor and St. Lawrence dr., Silver Spring. Dr. Harold H. Mitchell, county health director, and Miss Pauline Harris, county health nurse, will be the speakers.

Rural Area Postmen Ask Pay Increase

By Robert Bruskin
Post Reporter

RFD is beginning to mean HCL to the 32,300 mail carriers who bounce over country roads through sleet, rain, snow and especially mud.

The high cost of living, a Senate Civil Service Subcommittee was told Saturday is causing rural mailmen to dig deeply into their savings so that the mail can go through.

Supporting their request for a $1000 yearly pay raise, the National Rural Letter Carriers Association presented figures to show carriers are paying up to $650 a year more from their own funds than the Nation pays them to support their transportation. They get 6 cents a mile and pay out from 8 to 12 cents in upkeep expenses, Chairman William Langer (R., N. D.) was told.

"It cost me $548 more to maintain my equipment last year than the Government paid me for maintenance at 6 cents a mile," said Willard Manning, a mailman at Ponce de Leon, Fla., for 31 years.

"Is the problem worse in States with heavy snows?" asked Senator Langer.

"In my State the problem, Senator, is mud," said Manning.

B. A. Qinquest of Holdredge, Nebr., president of the association, said that operating costs for their transportation "nearly doubled" since 1939.

Cars have gone from $900 to about $1500, gas and oil is up 40 or 50 per cent, he said, repair costs have doubled and tires have increased in price.

Many wives of the carriers have been forced to find jobs because the average pay of $3076 is inadequate to support families, and many mailmen, he added, are also working part-time at other jobs to make ends meet.

Morton D. Trainer, jr., 43, a postoffice mechanic in Baltimore, complained that he was compelled to support his aged mother and father because the State refused them an old-age pension. That was done "because I am a Government employe," he said, and the State believes Government workers are paid enough to support their parents.

His father, said Trainer, who earns $3100 annually, receives $1.68 every two weeks as a pension for 10 years spent as a guard in a Baltimore art museum.

Langer ordered that the director of the Maryland State Welfare Board be brought before the committee for questioning.

"What kind of a regulation is this that a man can't get old-age pay because his son works for the Government?" yelled Langer. There's no reason why you should have to support your father."

100 Flee Cleveland Fire

Cleveland, Jan. 18 (AP).—Cleveland's third major fire in five days drove more than 100 persons from beds in a downtown business and rooming block before dawn today. No one was hurt. The fire destroyed the 60-year-old Perry-Payne building on St. Clair Ave. near East 10th st. Damage was estimated at $200,000.

Anti-Saloon Heads to Resign

Pittsburgh, Jan. 18 (AP).—The president and general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of America said here today they will resign this week, leaving the way open for "young blood."

At the same time, the league is contemplating a change in its title to either the National Temperance Federation or the National Temperance League. The change is urged by younger members who said they think they can carry on the "fight against liquor better under a new name."

These two actions were announced as the league opened its thirty-fifth national three-day convention.

Speaking before delegates from 40 States George W. Crabbe of Baltimore, Md., was first to reveal his plans to submit his resignation. He has been general superintendent of the league since 1940.

Older Seen Hardest Hit In Bad Times

By The Associated Press

A leading Government economist yesterday predicted the next depression will hit particularly hard at workers aged 45 and older and create "a national problem of the greatest importance."

Sooner or later, said Ewan Clague, commissioner of the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the Nation will have to face the problem and come to some decision because:

1. Steady streamlining of the United States industrial system is pushing "a very considerable number of workers in their 40s out of their jobs and their careers," and

2. These people still expect to work until reaching 65. At 45 the average man has ahead of him over 25 years of life."

The eventual choice that will have to be made, Clague wrote in Labor Review, a publication of the Labor Department, is either (a) lowering the present 65-year retirement age under the Social Security System to "remove these older workers from the labor market," or (b) "taking steps to assure the continued usefulness of these age groups as productive workers."

It won't take any major depression to bring the problem to a head, either, Clague reported. Even a "business setback" with five million unemployed and lasting only a year or so will do it, he said.

Once upon a time all this took care of itself, birth rates were low and death rates high so a person 45 years old was "one of the few survivors in his age group."

But now the life span is much longer, the population larger, machines have reduced the number of workers needed and placed the emphasis on youth.

A Report to every American . . .

from a business which affects every American!

In 1947, FOUR OUT OF FIVE of our families enjoyed the protection of life insurance! And the number of people protected is still growing . . .

Few people can carry all their risks alone! But together, for their peace of mind, Americans have voluntarily built up individual life insurance programs planned for their individual needs—which at the end of 1947 totalled $191 billion. $16 billion of this was added in 1947!

The more than 500 legal-reserve companies therefore have great responsibilities to the American people. That is why the life insurance companies and their agents again report on how they took care of your money, and the benefits they paid.

In 1947, life insurance devoted the major part of its time to the interests of the 75 million policyholders owning the more than 180 million separate policies which are ALREADY IN FORCE!

THE TOTAL FUNDS INVESTED by the end of 1947 for future payments to policyholders, added up to more than $51 billion. This was active money! It earned interest. And it provided capital for the nation's life and growth. In this way, life insurance serves ALL the people.

HELPS HOLD FAMILIES TOGETHER!

In 1947, the life insurance companies paid out $1,330 million in the settlement of 1,250,000 separate death claims. Each of these cases meant money for the family in a time of need. Many cases meant another mortgage paid off, or another business carrying on, or another home with a regular income assured for wife and children . . .

HELPS MAKE DREAMS COME TRUE!

But last year, more than half of total life insurance payments were to the living! Many of these are the stories of people happily retired on annuities, of endowments which will buy apple orchards or long-dreamed-of trips, of boys and girls who are sure they can go to college!

Some have less, some have more . . . but total life insurance protection now averages about $4700 for every family! This is future security which American men and women of their own initiative have built up for themselves . . . programs built with the help of trained life insurance agents, who not only "sell" but help make sure that each policy fits the needs of the policyholder and his family . . . now and in the future.

Life insurance is a key to planning for family happiness. But every policyholder can be proud, too, of what his thrift and his foresight contribute to protecting our NATIONAL future!

2. The outlook for continued abundant farm production, combined with less free spending and increased buying of things other than food "should with time relieve the upward pressure on prices."

The department said food accounts for 29 per cent of the consumer's dollar, more than at any time since immediately after World War I, whereas before the recent war it took less than 24 per cent.

"Eating at home is responsible for more than two thirds of this increased share," the department reported, "and restaurant eating less than one third.

Lower food prices coupled with a high standard of eating depend to some extent in holding on to rent controls, the department cautioned. Rent takes only 3 per cent of disposable income as compared with 5 per cent in the 1929-40 period, the smallest proportion in 40 years, the department said.

But it added that if rent controls were abandoned, "it is likely that a part of the rent increase would be paid at the expense of less food expenditures."

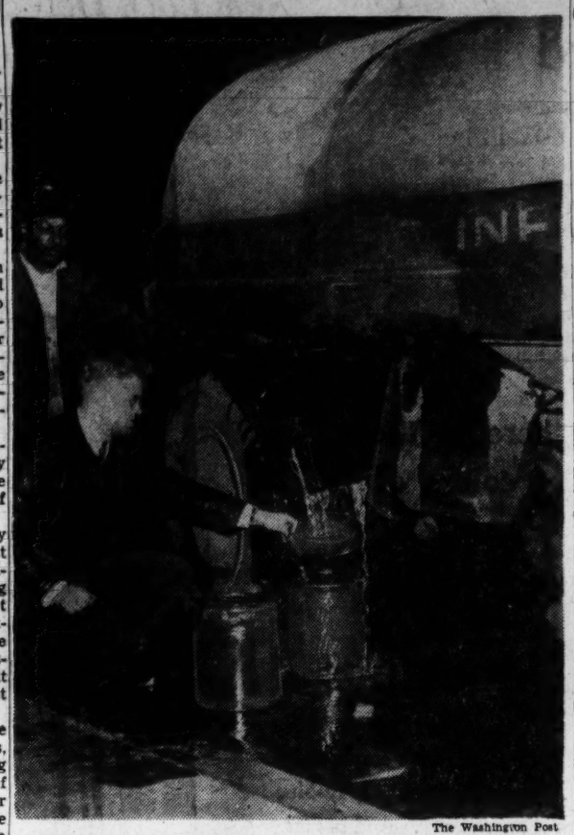
Income is soaring, the survey conceded, but explained that spending is higher, forcing liquidation of savings and borrowing to meet current costs. Market demand during the year, it pointed out, was greater even than the increased flow of farm and industrial production, with the result that available commodities got more and more expensive.

Gross national production, the total value of goods and services, reached 240 billion dollars during the year. Consumer buying of all types totaled 165 billion for the year, though in the last three months it had increased in tempo until consumers were buying at the rate of 172 billion a year.

Steel production, the department reported, reached an annual rate of 89 million tons of raw steel in the last quarter, less than 2 per cent below the wartime peak in the first quarter of 1944. Most factories reconverted from war production turned out goods faster than before the war, especially in washing machines, vacuum cleaners, electric ranges and radios. Refrigerators had not caught up, however, and the 4,790,000 automobiles and trucks produced were still behind the 1929 total of 5,358,000.

"Clothing production declined substantially," the department said, "primarily as a result of the sharp drop in the women's clothing industry. A drop also occurred in leather products due to the restricted output of shoes."

Fuel Oil Goes Down the Sewer



The Washington Post

WOULDN'T YOU KNOW?—A. J. Harder (left) of 17 Lee ave., Takoma Park, was ordered to drive his fuel oil truck to the nearest sewer by the Fire Department after the truck was hit and ripped open in a collision at 12th st. and Massachusetts ave nw., early yesterday. Chauncey McCoy, 909 R st. nw., (right) salvaged a little of the precious stuff pool to a depth of, say, 3 or 4 inches. This is because the weight of the water tends to counteract pressure exerted by the gases. Without this equalizing force, Kelly said the gases might do damage to the sheet metal lining.

Installed in 1922

The sheet metal lining was installed in 1922, Kelly said. He said it has been estimated it would cost between $150,000 and $200,000 to install a new one.

The continuing cold will worsen the fuel oil shortage which Saturday prompted President Truman to put the Government's fuel oil, gasoline and natural gas consumption on a virtual wartime basis. He decreed temperatures would be limited to 68 degrees during daytime in Government buildings and 60 degrees at night.

Mr. Truman also appealed to the public to reduce their consumption of fuel oil by 15 per cent.

Prompt action by District firemen helped save most of a 5000-gallon load of fuel oil at 2:30 a. m. yesterday when a truck tanker was in collision with an automobile at 12th st. and Massachusetts ave. nw.

Hole Plugged With Wood

A hole was gouged in the tanker, which is owned by M. I. O'Boyle, Inc. Firemen plugged the hole with wood and the tanker was driven to a nearby storage tank where its load was removed. A spokesman for the O'Boyle company said the loss was limited to between 200 and 300 gallons.

The United Press reported that International Falls, Minn., a city of 6000 with a serious fuel shortage, was offered fuel at almost double the normal cost by oil dealers at Muskogee, Okla., and St. Paul, Minn.

"There seems to be plenty of oil if you want to pay the price," said the town's mayor, Don Hodgon. "A few are capitalizing on the hard luck of others."

The United States Weather Bureau at Chicago reported the country's lowest temperature yesterday morning was 44 below zero at Land o'Lakes, Wis. A chiller of 54 below was reported Saturday at Gordon, Wis.

These findings of The Washington Post Poll are based on personal interviews with a representative cross-section of people living in Greater Washington.

Local residents 60 years of age and older were asked:

What do you have to do to stay young?

They replied:

	Of those 60 and over
Keep interested in things, have hobbies, belong to organizations	20%
Work hard, keep busy	19
Associate with young people (Adds to more than 100 per cent because more than one answer was possible).	19
Live moderately, have good habits, live a good life	17
Take care of yourself, keep healthy	12
Don't worry	10
Keep young ideas, forget your age, think of yourself as young	10
Be happy, laugh, enjoy yourself	10
Be a Christian, observe the Golden Rule, give of yourself	10

There's nothing you can do to stay young	5
I wish I knew, no suggestions (Adds to more than 100 per cent because more than one answer was possible.)	8

Oldest person interviewed on The Washington Post Poll was a cheerful lady of 89 years, who supports herself by running a rooming house in the Northeast section. Her suggestion was, "Don't get grumpy, and be a good sport."

Among those 70 years and older interviewed, 74 per cent live with their families, 4 per cent live alone, and 22 per cent do not live with relatives, but take in roomers. Twenty-six per cent live with husbands or wives.

The Washington Post Pollers asked old and young alike:

Aside from years, what would you say are the main ways in which old people are different from younger people?

Here are the replies of the oldsters:

Compared to young people, old people are:	Of those 60 and over
More experienced, mature, settled, wiser	36%
Less active physically, less vigorous	20
More cautious, conservative, foresighted, inclined to keep out of trouble	15
More set in ideas, narrow, habit-bound, intolerant	12
Less hopeful, ambitious, more resigned	10
Less pleasure-seeking	8
More childish, easily hurt, nerves bad	7
Different ideas, old-fashioned ideas	7
More considerate, patient, thoughtful	5
More religious, moral	5
More cranky, ill-tempered	5
More dependent, less freedom of action	5
Live in past, isolated from world	5
Other differences (less alert mentally, more aches and pains, blemishes and wrinkles, etc.)	10
No difference between old and young aside from years	5
Depends on the person, on family treatment	3

(Adds to more than 100 per cent because more than one answer was possible).

Contrasted with older people, only 20 per cent of those under 60 mentioned the greater wisdom and experience of old age. Twenty-seven per cent said they were more narrow and set in their ways.

PCA Plans Merger With Third Party

Affiliation With Wallace Group Authorized Upon Its Establishment

Chicago, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—The second annual convention of the Progressive Citizens of America today authorized the PCA national board and State chapters to take steps toward affiliation or merger with the third party planned by Henry Wallace in his bid for the Presidency.

In the closing session, the 500 delegates by voice vote authorized State chapters to affiliate or merge with the Wallace-for-President Committee or the new third party in their respective States, after consultation with the PCA's national office. The national board was authorized to affiliate or merge the whole organization with the third party upon its establishment.

The national board's decision would become final when approved by the boards of directors of two thirds of the State chapters.

Wallace Views Backed

The delegates, who yesterday gave Wallace their unqualified support in his presidential bid, also roared approval in their final session of a legislative program for 1948 which embraces most of his political views.

In supporting the third party plan, the convention authorized sending of delegates to a national "third party" convention. Wallace supporters are scheduled to hold a national convention April 12.

Many of the delegates here said they had been members of the Bull Moose Party in 1912 and the Progressive Party in 1924.

At the final session, Paul Robeson, singer, led a "PCA donation" drive. He sang an improvised song, "We'll All Join Gideon's Army," to the tune of "Old Time Religion." Girls passed down the aisle and collected $2336.

Shapley Among Supporters

During the last day's session, a group of artists and scientists belonging to the PCA's arts, sciences and professional group held a press conference to add their indorsement to Wallace's candidacy and the third party movement.

The group includes Dr. Harlow Shapley, Harvard University, who is president of the National Association for the Advancement of Science; Dr. Frank Oppenheimer, physicist who had a leading role in development of the atomic bomb; Author Louis Adamic, Actress Edith Atwater, and Screen Writer Howard Koch, who said he was "one of the 19" in referring to the House Un-American Activities Committee investigation into Hollywood.

Wallace Movement Losing Labor Support

New York, Jan. 18 (U.P.).—Henry A. Wallace's third party movement lost further organized labor support today when 24 members of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, CIO, resigned their American Labor Party posts in protest and the New York rank and file of the United Public Workers, CIO, challenged their officers' indorsement of Wallace.

dinner tonight to hear Senator Knowland (R., Calif.) speak. Senator Wherry (R., Nebr.) will address a luncheon tomorrow.

Sprague said that while New York's delegation will not go formally pledged "it will be unanimously for Dewey," now out in the open for the nomination.

Two delegates favorably to Dewey were nominated Saturday in the 33d New York Congressional District. Ninety district delegates in all will be elected in an April primary, with seven delegates at large being selected later by the party's state committee.

Harrison E. Spangler, Iowa committeeman, said Iowa's 23-member delegation, to be chosen in State convention, will go to Philadelphia uninstructed and with "open minds to sit down and select the best man."

Kenneth Bradley, Connecticut committeeman, said his State's delegation of 19, to be selected in April, would undoubtedly back Senator Baldwin (R., Conn.) as its first choice for the presidential nomination.

Several committee members among the early arrivals would not discuss the movement to nominate Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower except on condition that they not be quoted.

They said they believed the general to be receptive to a nomination despite his expressed disinterest in politics.

Kenny Reelected Chairman of PCA

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Robert W. Kenny of Los Angeles today was reelected chairman of the Progressive Citizens of America at its second annual convention. Thomas I. Emerson, New Haven, Conn., was named secretary, and Amraham L. Pomerantz, New York City, treasurer.

The following are among the vice chairmen chosen:

Clark Foreman, Washington; Paul Robeson, Litchfield, Conn.; Dr. Harlow Shapley, Cambridge, Mass.; Bishop R. R. Wright, jr., of the African Methodist Episcopal Church, Oberlin, Ohio; Dr. Joseph L. Johnson, Washington; Gregory Peck, Los Angeles, Calif.

Joe Davidson, New York sculptor, was reelected honorary chairman.

Oil Shortage

"If everyone saves a little there'll be enough for all." This terse statement sums up the conclusion reached by the American Petroleum Institute. It is amply supported by facts and figures on oil consumption and supply. President Truman has responded to this appeal to save fuel oil and gasoline by ordering daytime temperatures in Government buildings to be held down to 68 degrees and calling for other conservation measures suggested by the industry.

Since the President lacks power to compel private citizens to reduce consumption of oil and gasoline, voluntary cooperation in the conservation campaign is essential if there is to be "enough for all." The people of Washington and other communities confronted by serious oil shortages accordingly have an opportunity to test the efficacy of voluntary methods of allocating scarce supplies of a highly essential commodity. If they ignore appeals to reduce oil consumption in face of the present emergency, they may experience severe hardship through exhaustion of fuel supplies. They would certainly be asking for compulsory rationing as an alternative remedy that, incidentally, would probably come too late to serve a protective purpose.

We believe that most people will be willing to cut down their oil consumption, if they understand the reasons for present regional shortages. The most significant fact stressed by the American Petroleum Institute is that the oil companies have actually been producing and delivering more fuel oil and gasoline than ever before. The 1947 output exceeded that of the peak war year—1945. Yet demand has outrun supply, owing to the increased use of oil for heating purposes and the high level of industrial activity as well as the recent rapid increase in the number of motor vehicles and power driven farm implements. Of course, severe winter weather has temporarily aggravated local shortages, making remedial action the more pressing.

To add to its difficulties the oil industry is handicapped by inadequate transportation facilities. Indeed, transportation is regarded by the industry as the number one supply problem. Huge orders have been placed for new equipment, but deliveries have been delayed by shortages of steel needed for oil field apparatus, pipelines, expansion of refining capacity, and construction of tanks and barges. In short, oil is one of the bottleneck industries whose problems cannot be solved by quick and easy methods. Consequently the only way to deal with shortages that embrace wide areas is to reduce consumption in those areas. It is up to the people of Washington and other cities faced by the same emergency to decide whether the inevitable adjustment of demand to available supplies shall be made voluntarily, with all sharing in the sacrifices, or through the operation of market forces that are no respecter of persons or individual needs.

Canada's Way

The decision of the Canadian government to reimpose price ceilings on meat and butter is in line with the selective price-control policy that country has been following. Instead of rashly shuffling off controls after the war and scrapping her control machinery, Canada dispensed with controls gradually. Most of them had been dropped by last September. However, controls were reestablished on various processed foods in November when prices rose sharply following the ban imposed on imports of such goods from the United States. Another price-lifting wave followed the recent announcement that an upward adjustment had been made in the prices Great Britain had contracted to pay Canada for bacon, eggs and beef. And, again, Canada has acted to protect her citizens from the impact of increases in essential foods.

As we pointed out when price ceilings were restored on processed foods, Canada has by her actions testified to her belief in the justice and efficacy of selective price controls. Instead of considering it unfair and discriminatory to single out certain commodities for control, the Canadian Finance Minister thinks that it is unfair to permit any group of producers or distributors to charge excessively high prices for their products merely because the public is prepared to pay or is even actively encouraging profiteering.

In our opinion, the arguments in favor of selective price control for Canada apply with equal, if not greater, force to the United States. The American people also need protection against a lowering of living standards resulting from excessive increases in the prices of essential articles, meat in particular. The mere grant of the authority requested by President Truman to impose price and rationing controls on items "of outstanding importance to industrial production or to the cost of living" might prevent further increases by serving notice of intention to impose controls if voluntary restraints prove ineffective.

Secret Hearings

Too little attention has been given to the complaint of Senator Theodore F. Green as to secrecy in congressional investigations. The Senator from Rhode Island recognizes the necessity for closed hearings when national defense secrets are under discussion and in other rare instances involving irresponsible charges against individuals. "But I cannot agree," he said, "with the general practice which has recently been used too often, of taking testimony in secret session. The public is entitled to know. Secrecy is generally bad for the public interest. Open hearings are the only safe hearings."

Mr. Green seems to forget the secret inquiries prior to 1946. One of the most notorious examples of undercover hearings was Representative Cox's investigation of the FCC more than four years ago, and the Committee on Un-American Activities has long employed this technique. The important fact is, however, that a discreditable practice is being employed, and we strongly sympathize with Mr. Green's denunciation of it.

Today, moreover, secret hearings are less excusable than ever. The Legislative Reorganization Act of 1946 provides that "all hearings conducted by standing committees or their subcommittees shall be open to the public, except executive sessions for marking up bills or for voting or where the committee by a majority vote orders a secret executive session." This is a sound provision based on the principle that the public business should be transacted in public. Obviously it should be observed by investigating subcommittees no less than by others.

One other serious abuse to which Mr. Green points is the leakage of secret information from the files of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee which is investigating commodity market transactions. Senator Ferguson, the chairman, admitted to reporters that former Governor Stassen had been permitted to see the subcommittee's confidential files. Apparently that was the source of Mr. Stassen's information about Edwin W. Pauley's $932,703 profits from his Commodity Exchange operations. Why should Mr. Stassen have access to data in possession of a congressional committee before they are available to the public? In charging Mr. Pauley with reaping profits as a "Government insider" Mr. Stassen was apparently trying to reap political profits from information he had gotten as a congressional insider.

We doubt that any Senator can reflect on practices of this sort without recognizing that they are unfair and inimical to the interests of democratic government. When congressional machinery is utilized to find facts, let it operate in the open where the public can fairly appraise its findings. And let the information flow out to the people at the earliest possible moment, instead of being bottled up or directed into special channels for partisan purposes.

Grain Allocations

The legality of the allocation powers under which consumption of grain by distilleries is restricted is now a matter for court decision. The Schenley Distilling Corp. has filed suit challenging the constitutionality of the temporary allocation provision on the ground that it is discriminatory in applying only to distillers. It also objects to Secretary Anderson's order making the quotas retroactive to include the last week of December after the end of the voluntary shutdown. Another distiller, Park & Tilford, has signified its intention to file a similar suit. The significance of the decision lies not so much in its present application as in whether it will bar this form of allocation from future use as a means of saving grain for Europe.

Regardless of the outcome, however, it is apparent that something must be done to meet the situation when the Administration's authority ends January 31. Conditions have not changed materially from those which led Congress to include the allocation powers in the Anti-inflation Act. Although winter wheat prospects have improved somewhat and the present estimate of forthcoming European crops is better, a critical period lies ahead. The wheat export goal has undergone a forced cut of 50 million bushels from the original figure of 500 million because of congressional insistence on a minimum carryover of 150 million bushels. Corn disappearance is at a near-record level, with the probable consequence of a negligible carryover. The corn supply, of course, determines in large measure how much wheat will be available for export. Meanwhile distillers are undergoing little hardship as the result of current limitations, largely because of the fact that in 1946 and 1947 they produced twice as much whisky as they sold.

It is essential, we think, that Congress provide means to prevent a breakdown of our exports. To escape the charge of discrimination, in our opinion the new allocation law should encompass other industrial users of grain. These include brewers, bakers and millers, and wet processors who manufacture such items as starch, corn sugar and syrup. The degree of limitation must of course be conditioned on the essentiality of the product. In this connection, distillers, although they use only approximately 10 per cent of the cash corn, will loom large because of the close relation between their purchases and corn prices. In other words, we do not think any relaxation of limitations on grain use by distillers is justified; but in fairness use by other industrial consumers ought to be put to the same test. The important consideration is that Congress must act before January 31, to broaden allocation powers if it is not to leave the door open for a grab that can undo all the good that has been done.

Job Insurance Threat

The benefits derivable from the limited supervisory controls that the Federal Government is able to exercise over State systems of unemployment insurance are currently endangered. The peril comes from a movement sponsored by the National Association of Manufacturers and the Conference of State Governors to provide for a 100 per cent State tax offset to the 3 per cent Federal unemployment tax instead of the present 90 per cent offset. This proposal commends itself to some large industrial States in which employers pay more to the Federal Government by way of the retained portion of the unemployment payroll tax than the State governments get back in the form of Federal grants to finance the administrative costs of their unemployment insurance systems. But it would be a grave mistake to view this 100 per cent credit offset proposal as merely a device for relieving the States of tax burdens. Indeed, from the viewpoint of a good many States, the losses would exceed the gains.

The real objective of this campaign is, we fear, to get rid of Federal supervision—by emancipating the States from dependence upon Federal financial aid that subjects their operations to critical scrutiny. Although some States would, no doubt, continue to maintain efficient programs of unemployment insurance, without external prodding, there is good reason for believing that many would fail to do so. The result would be that the employers of the States with sound and adequate systems of unemployment insurance would be placed at a competitive disadvantage with the employers of those States that (to quote Representative Dingell) had "turned their State unemployment compensation laws to their own short-sighted selfish interests." It appears, therefore, that a good many members of the National Association of Manufacturers would have reason to regret the success of a movement designed to divorce State unemployment insurance from financial dependence on the Federal Government. But of course the chief victims of the proposed change would be the workers living in States that yielded to the temptation to lower their protective standards and cut benefits.

It should also be pointed out that the proposal to allow the States a 100 per cent offset to the Federal unemployment tax would probably result in depriving the Federal Government of any control over administrative standards of State employment services. At present the administrative expenses of these employment services are financed by the Federal Government, with the Department of Labor authorized to allocate appropriations among the States. Although revenues from the portion of the Federal unemployment tax actually paid to the Federal Government are not earmarked for use in covering the operational costs of either State unemployment insurance or employment service programs, there is an obvious link-up between the two. Moreover, returns are more than sufficient to cover the administrative outlays of the Federal Government for both these services. Hence to indorse a program for turning back to the States these particular taxes, is equivalent to recommending that the States assume full responsibility for administrative costs and operations.

Indeed, the joint conference of Governors and representatives of various congressional committees are on record as favoring the proposal "that the Federal Government should relinquish to the States, the Federal tax on employers levied to cover the administrative expenses of the State employment security program, and the States will assume the responsibility for the administration of the unemployment compensation and employment service programs." It is not surprising, therefore, that veteran and labor groups, including the American Legion, Veterans of Foreign Wars and the AFL, are fighting the 100 per cent set-off proposal in the belief that its purpose is to remove the Federal Government from any participation in State employment service programs.

THIS FAREWELL

Having said goodbye, terror comes out somewhere
To harness breath and press the throat down hard.
And this becomes a terrible thick air
As doors between are swiftly shut and barred.

Now all is surely lost. You understand
The ice strung in the blood, the moving away
Of the loved form and mind; and the warm hand:
One suddenly shoved upon an empty day.

The faltering words to speak when you depart
Are unavailing. Nothing will atone
For the unmeasured ill which the choked heart
Receives in silence and endures alone.

Truman's Tax Plan

President Truman's proposal for a $40 income-tax credit to each household member to be offset by an increase of over three billions in the taxes on corporations shows a woeful lack of understanding of the incidence of taxation.

Income taxes, Federal and State, are basic factors in the increase of living costs and general inflation, as it is beyond human ingenuity to devise any scheme of deriving revenues from the products or profits of industry wherein the burden may not in general be passed on to the ultimate consumer with, more often than not, a considerable profit. The effect of such levies may be seen in the complacency to them on the part of big business and may shed some light on the high gains of leading corporations despite the heavy burdens of taxation they are supposed to be carrying. Hence, as pointed out by Senator Taft, adoption of the proposed income tax shift would have an effect quite opposite to the professed intention.

GSI Strike

In your editorial, "Banning Conciliation," of January 8, you chose to ignore the fact that by knowingly and flagrantly refusing to comply with the law, the union is defying the authority of Congress and the Government. Yet you would have the Conciliation Service overlook the defiance, and act on behalf of the union. You call it "hidden mischief," but I fail to see that anything is "hidden" when the Communist affidavits and the financial statements required by the Taft-Hartley Act have been given extensive publicity.

You take GSI to task as "mischievous" for taking advantage of a specific requirement of the law, yet do not censure the union for disregarding the law. If the union officials were honestly concerned about the welfare of the members they would have filed the necessary affidavits and financial statements six months ago.

The "union-busting bludgeon," as you call it, could have become a harmless twig in November had the union officials filed the affidavit after GSI served notice that that would be a prerequisite to the contract negotiations.

As long as the strikers were content to work for the wages paid them, the managers of Government Services, Inc., deemed them good patriotic laborers. There are appearing too many cases where parties engaged in controversies are using the issue of patriotism as a red herring dragged across the trail to divert attention from the real issues at hand. There is no surer way to lessen interest in patriotism by the masses of American citizens than the use of the term "patriotism" as a flim-flam, to prevent controversies, strikes and differences from being settled on the merits of the issues involved.

Chest Suggestions

It has occurred to me that the public hears little or nothing about the Community Chest except during its drive for funds. Perhaps if the Chest could raise funds not only during the drive but throughout the 12-month period, not have solicitations but from benefit performances. Performances, whether they be football games, concerts, boxing matches, or any event in which the public has an interest—even though it were night clubs, holding dances on a Sunday night or special prominent persons engaging in some function in which the Chest would obtain some financial gain. It resolves itself down into letting the Chest or some one interested in behalf of the Chest promote activities throughout the year with no direct burden on the people, since they would be receiving something for their money expended.

The second idea is to hold through the designated key workers a monthly, quarterly or periodic raffle. It need not be a lottery.

The third suggestion is to take a percentage of each year's collection and place it in an investment fund. Irrespective of the failure to meet the goal, set aside a definite percentage sufficiently large some day to be a fund drawing a substantial return to help carry the activities of the Chest.

"New Blood Shot"

After reading Malvina Lindsay's column of January 3, "New Blood Shot for U. S.," I am constrained to implore a deeper consideration for the American laborer. The author of this article wishes prompt action by Congress to allow DPs in European camps to enter the United States as laborers. This desire seems to be based partly on the predication that "the half million domestics who left kitchens for war jobs have not returned to any extent to their former pursuits." The author seems to have made a complete survey, for figures are given listing 30,000 domestics and the total number of nurses and teachers in the 850,000 men, women and children encamped.

Before Congress gives the green light on this matter, it should also make a survey to ascertain the effect this absorption would have upon the American labor siuation and, in addition, see that a pro rata distribution is made. In a communistic country, the matter in question would not be serious. In America, the labor group is the heart of the Nation. "Competition" is its stimulant; but, like any heart stimulant, too much paralyzes.

"Right Angle"

I wish to correct an impression gained by some persons from an article in The Washington Post of January 8, entitled "Peace Seekers' Ad Brings 50 Visitors."

Right Angle, referred to in the above article as being edited by Mrs. King, one of the "peace seekers," is edited by John C. Galloway, a fact which might have been easily checked by your reporter's looking at a copy of the journal. Mrs. King is an associate editor.

The important thing, however, is to point out that Right Angle, for which Mrs. King quite ably writes art reviews, is in no wise connected with "peace movements" nor concerned with government except of course as the latter affects the arts, which are Right Angle's exclusive field.

I believe it is in the interest of journalistic accuracy that you publish the above clarifications.

Judge Margold

Great men, like great events, indelibly leave their imprints upon the records of our time. Such a person was the late distinguished Justice of the Municipal Court of the District of Columbia, the Honorable Nathan R. Margold. Because it was my privilege to serve with him for six years when I was personal assistant to the Secretary of the Interior and later Undersecretary of the Interior and he was Solicitor of the Department, I am taking this opportunity of expressing my grief about our loss of a great jurist and a great public servant.

In my 42 years on the Washington scene I have never encountered a more learned lawyer and devotee of the public weal. In cases of utmost concern to all of the American people he defended successfully the Government's—that is, the people's—interests in prosecuting oil, land, and mineral resources cases before the Federal courts. This resulted in the saving of incalculable millions of dollars, as well as the preservation and conservation of essential natural resources which were of inestimable value in winning the late war, and in meeting our vast needs today.

President Roosevelt rewarded this rare skill by appointing him first to our Municipal Court and later to the Court of Appeals of the District of Columbia. The accolade of the distinguished members of the bar of the city to this distinguished jurist at his passing acknowledged his fine contribution to the law and his public service to the Nation.

Effects of Segregation

This is in answer to the letter signed Citizen in The Washington Post of January 11. It is obvious that the author is of the race that has never been denied full freedom and service in public places. Therefore, he has never felt the terrible embarrassment and humiliation of being told, "Sorry, but you can't be served here."

Or if you are served a sandwich you're told to take it outside; so you've got to stand out on the street in the cold and eat like a dog.

Yet the colored man is expected to accept this treatment without resentment. That is the reason there is so much fighting and strife in the world today. One group is trying to withhold from the other its God-given rights and privileges.

Citizen states that segregation is the only way to prevent mongrelization of the races. But I want to point out that there is no place in America where segregation is practiced more than in the South and yet you will find more near-white children born there among the colored race than in any other place. Nothing has been, or can ever be, accomplished by segregation. It only creates bitterness, malice, hate and discord between races.

Promotion By Selection

Prior to the enactment of the "Promotion by Selection" Act of Congress, which provides for selection of officers for promotion to higher grades, your columns contained many arguments for and against this act.

The majority of officers of the Army did not desire selection for promotion in that politics would enter into selections. This was denied by the proponents of the act.

In your issue of December 17 there appeared an article headed, "Senate Defers Confirmation of Top Officers to Learn Why Some Were Passed Over." And, to date, that is the story. That is what is going to happen when selections are made to fill the grade of colonel and lower positions. Selection for promotion is wonderful—if everyone agrees that the right people are so selected.

The Functionalist

FORM AND FUNCTION: Remarks on Art by Horatio Greenough; edited by Harold A. Small with an introduction by Erle Loran. (University of California Press, $2.75.)

Horatio Greenough, as I dare say you will recall, was the first professional sculptor native to these United States. He was a Boston Yankee whose father had accumulated a good deal of wealth in the building and real estate boom of the early nineteenth century. As a youth, Greenough studied drawing under the celebrated Washington Allston, anatomy under the guidance of some local medico, the use of a mallet and chisel under the guidance of some local stonecutter, and the classics at Harvard College. Having thus exhausted the proximate opportunities of esthetic education, he removed to Italy to become a pupil of the great Thorvaldsen and later of Bartolini, taking with him his republican principles, his Protestant prejudices and the itch, not altogether uncommon among his countrymen, for meddling in the domestic politics of foreign peoples.

As an artist, Greenough is known as one of the less gifted exponents of the neo-classical manner which is called Greek Revival. He was among other things author of that group of figures which flanks the steps leading to the rotunda of the Capitol and shows a frontiersman in the act of preventing the slaughter of his family by an Indian. Greenough's most celebrated production, however, is the statue of Washington, executed under a commission obtained for him through the influence of Allston, Edward Everett and James Fenimore Cooper. It was designed for the rotunda of the Capitol but was subsequently relegated by an ironic fate to the Smithsonian Institution, that monument, as Greenough considered it, to medieval bigotry and reactionary politics. In this statue, if you remember, the Father of his Country is represented by a very slightly draped seated figure. Thus exposed, the Washington torso appears to have been almost as damaging to the maidenly sensibilities of the age as was Hiram Powers' marble figure of The Greek Slave. To a sophisticated modern eye it is apparent that Greenough's purpose was to impart a kind of Olympian grandeur to his figure, yet the actual effect of this demi-nudity is rather of a kind of noble invalidism; it is as though the great Washington were sitting patiently in his sick-chamber while some unseen nurse goes about the business of changing the bedclothes. But the interesting thing, of course, is to observe how completely Greenough's statue violates his own esthetic theories as set forth in these selections from his writings, lovingly compiled by Mr. Small.

For it appears that in his role of critic Horatio Greenough was the original prophet of what is called nowadays "functional art," expounded in architecture by the late Louis Sullivan, Mr. Frank Lloyd Wright and M. Charles-Edouard Jeanneret, and in sculpture by the late Eric Gill, Comrade Jo Davidson and various others. This discovery was made, I believe, by Mr. Van Wyck Brooks when he reexamined Greenough's writing for The Flowering of New England, Prof. F. O. Matthiessen in his study of The American Renaissance, devoted a good deal of attention to Greenough, whom he seems to consider a profound representative of the democratic genius and a close spiritual kinsman of Thoreau and Whitman. And Emerson, nearly a century ago, observed how Greenough had anticipated by several years Ruskin's doctrine that the art and architecture of a people reflect its religious values. That notion is today so much a commonplace that no stranger, standing between, let us say, St. Patrick's Cathedral and Rockefeller Center, would have any hesitation about saying which of them is the more representative of our beliefs and aspirations. All the same, it must have been something of a shock to pious Americans in 1843 when Horatio Greenough sarcastically compared "the puny cathedral of Broadway," meaning, of course, Trinity Church, to the robust "roar of the Astor House and the mammoth vase of the great reservoir." The Gothic spire of Trinity, he said, is a mere bit of make-believe, a piece of pure frippery borrowed from an utterly alien spiritual climate; but the hotel and the reservoir were examples of what American genius could produce when it went to work in earnest. But he was hardly less indignant at the architects of the Romantic revival who sought to create Gothic churches or Medieval castles out of wood, lath and plaster than at the architects of Greek Revival who sought to convert Doric temples and Attic shrines into banks, warehouses, Government offices and domestic habitations. "I contend," he wrote, "for Greek principles, not for Greek things. If a flat sail goes nearest wind, a bellying sail, though picturesque, must be given up. The men who have reduced locomotion to its simplest elements in the trotting wagon and the yacht America are nearer to Athens at this moment than they who would bend the Greek temple to every use."

However, as Emerson said of Greenough, "his tongue was far cunninger in talk than his chisel to carve," and indeed the Sage might have added, "Or his pen to write." Greenough's prose, like his statuary, is anything but functional. It suffers from all the vices he denounced in public architecture, especially rhetoric. It strives for a kind of lofty eloquence apparently in imitation of Burke, and is lavishly embroidered with borrowed ornament in the form of classical tags, archaic modes, and pompous periphrasis.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Selling It Versus Working It

IN ITS presentation of the Marshall Plan the Administration is in a dilemma which will have to be resolved by bringing it into open discussion. This dilemma is well understood in Europe, above all in Moscow. But here thus far it has not been explained in the public testimony for the Plan.

Lippmann

One horn of the dilemma is the belief that Congress can be induced to support the plan only if it is presented in terms of the conflict between the western world and the Soviet orbit. The other horn of the dilemma is the fact that the plan itself demands an ever increasing economic cooperation, and is calculated not on the assumption of the division of Europe into two antagonistic coalitions but on the reunion of western and eastern Europe.

THAT THIS is the truth can readily be demonstrated. The Paris report, the Harriman report, and the State Department's own technical studies are agreed that "the revival of the German economy is indispensable." General Clay, who has the highest responsibility in Germany, has just stated in his monthly report that the extent to which western Germany will be able to trade its manufactured products for food from eastern Europe is of "decisive importance" to the indispensable revival of the German economy.

The technical report of the Department of State on western Germany, which has just been released, contains the figures which prove how decisively important is the economic reunion of Europe to this indispensable objective of the Marshall Plan. The figures leave no ground whatever for the idea, now current in this country, that western Germany can be made self-supporting, that it can, as this saying goes, be taken off the American taxpayer's back, if the iron curtain were to become an impenetrable barrier.

"THE BIZONAL pattern of trade at the end of the recovery plan"—namely, 1952, "is expected," says the State Department's study, "to conform to the prewar pattern in essentials, although the scale of trade and its direction and constituent items will almost certainly be substantially changed." The figures are even more eloquent than this reticent observation. In the coming fiscal year (1948-49) bizonal Germany will draw from the Western Hemisphere nearly seven tenths of its imports. From the "nonparticipating countries," which means the Russian orbit including eastern Germany, our bizonal Germany will draw somewhat more than three tenths of its imports.

But by 1952, if the Marshall Plan has been adopted and works as now calculated, Bizonia will be drawing as much from the Soviet orbit as from the Western Hemisphere. If we take the total figures for the whole four and a quarter years of the Marshall Plan, we find that Bizonia is expected to receive larger imports from the Soviet orbit (2.14 billions worth) than from the United States (two billions).

That is why General Clay says that trade with eastern Europe is of "decisive importance."

THE HARD and unalterable fact is, therefore, that the Marshall Plan cannot be made to work unless the cold war diminishes, unless reciprocal trade opens up large holes through the iron curtain, unless economic intercourse between East and West transcends the ideological and political conflict between East and West. The Marshall Plan is officially called, and quite correctly, the European Recovery Program; it cannot be made to work, its promises cannot be fulfilled, if it is merely a western European Recovery Program.

If then we had to assume that Congress will not accept the plan on terms which permit and encourage the kind of intercourse and mutual aid which General Clay looks forward to with the Soviet orbit,—if also we had to assume that Moscow's bitter opposition to the Marshall Plan is implacable—then the Marshall Plan is bound to fail. The economic calculations of the plan require cooperation; the political and ideological conflict prevents it. We shall witness the collision of an irresistible force with an immovable object.

BUT WE do not have to make either of these two mutually destructive assumptions. We do not have to assume that the American people can be persuaded to do great things only if they are frightened and angry. They have in the past and, I think, they will now support the idea of a constructive peace if they can be shown that there is a reasonably good practical chance of getting it.

NOR DO WE have to assume that General Clay is wrong when he thinks that, despite all the conflict, the reciprocal need for trade will prevail. For the real obstacle to trade between West and East is not the iron curtain; it is that neither western Europe, including western Germany, nor eastern Europe has enough goods to trade with. Nobody in Europe is rich enough to give away anything. But insofar as the western countries can produce goods which the eastern ones need and want, they can sell them inside the Soviet orbit. Insofar as the eastern countries are producing commodities which the western ones need and want, they can be bought with the goods.

The impediment to trade is inability on both sides of the iron curtain to deliver the goods. Nobody in eastern Europe is hoarding food or burning it up because he does not want to accept tractors, or machine tools, or telephone exchanges, made by Fascist beasts and imperialists in the West. The real trouble is that the Fascist beasts and imperialists are so beastly short of tractors, machine tools, and other desirable goods. And nobody in the West is refusing to buy eastern commodities because they consist of Marxist, Stalinist, Cominform wheat and coal. The trouble there, too, is that there is not enough wheat and coal.

THE GREAT virtue and force of the Marshall Plan in respect to the division of Europe is not that it enables the West to live without the Soviet orbit but that it enables the West to develop good bargaining power in order to trade with the Soviet orbit. The Marshall Plan provides the working capital to produce the goods with which reciprocal trade can be increased, and the indivisible unity of the European community as a whole restored.

That is the way the Marshall Plan was originally "sold" to the whole world, and with all due respect to the public relations experts in the Truman Administration who think otherwise, it is still the best way to sell it to the world. It is certainly the only truthful way to sell it to anyone.

Hawkes Calls Truman Wild 'Demagogue'

By the United Press

Senator Albert W. Hawkes (R., N. J.) yesterday accused President Truman of "reckless demogoguery in a frenzied search for votes" and protested that he has given destructive ammunition to those who would destroy free enterprise.

He denounced Mr. Truman's $40-a-head tax-cut plan and his request for strict controls over some segments of the Nation's economy as "shot through with implied criticism of business as profiteers."

The truth is, as proved by Commerce Department figures, that industry averages a profit of only 3.2 per cent, he said.

"The President's suggestions represent the most efficient method of destroying our economy that has yet been proposed," he said. "It has given the enemies of free enterprise the most destructive ammunition they have enjoyed for many years."

The Administration, from President Truman down, he said, is "seeking to be all things to all leftists because they have votes."

Hawkes emphasized that he is "no friend of low wages" and does not advocate "economic bourbonishm." But he said it was "incumbent upon business to tell its own story to the fairest-minded people in the world—the American public."

Hawkes ridiculed the President's economic policies as best suited to have "entertained Alice in Wonderland."

He cited as an example, the President's plea that industry voluntarily cut prices as a means of curbing inflation.

"Prices are absolutely beyond industry's control unless they want to go into bankruptcy," he wrote. "Of all business being done by industry, 86 per cent of the total amount is going for salaries and wages. The other 14 per cent is retained for profits, reserves, renewals and protection against poor years, changes in consumer or trade demands, and other basic risks of business. An average of 3.2 per cent is retained for profits.

"Those figures are those of the Department of Commerce, not mine."

Child Guidance Clinic Sessions Scheduled

The Child Guidance Clinic at the Southwest Health Center will hold regular sessions for Negro children on Wednesdays from 9 a. m. to noon and on Fridays from 1 to 4:30 p. m., beginning this week.

Miss Gertrude Marill, Health Department psychologist, and Miss Grace Matthews of the Bureau of Public Health Nursing, will direct the clinic. Consultations will be by appointment, which should be arranged by parents at the clinic, the Health Department announced.

Negro College Is Offered To 15 States

Nashville, Tenn., Jan. 18 (AP).—The trustees of Meharry Medical College for Negroes offered today to turn the eight-million dollars institution over to 15 Southern States to operate in the event they put into effect a program, now under consideration, for separate regional schools for white and Negro students.

The offer was made at a meeting here of a five-member committee on regional education from the Southern Governors Conference. The meeting reported complete agreement on the necessity of the regional educational plan and said it would so report to a full meeting of the Governor's Conference within the next six weeks at a meeting place to be selected.

At the conclusion of today's closed meeting, Governor Millard T. Caldwell of Florida, committee chairman, stressed that the regional program antedated recent decisions by the United States Supreme Court.

In those decisions the high court has ordered Southern States to provide Negro and white students with equal educational opportunities to be made available in the same length of time.

Proposed Last October

The regional program, proposed by Governor Jim McCord of Tennessee at a meeting of Southern Governors last October in Asheville, N. C., was discussed today by Governors McCord, Caldwell, M. E. Thompson of Georgia, William Tuck of Virginia and William Preston Lane of Maryland. Lane is chairman of the Southern Governors Conference.

In his statement tiday Governor Caldwell said:

"It is apparent that no single Southern State is financially able to supply the best educational facilities for all of its citizens. In certain specialized fields there are not enough students to justify establishment of separate schools in each State.

"It is apparent that if the Southern States work together they can establish and maintain the very best in educational opportunities in all fields for all of their citizens, regardless of race. Purely incidental to this meeting, the trustees of Meharry College have reached the conclusion that it must close unless the Southern States can take over its operation.

"Therefore they have offered to turn over this institution, including an endowment of five million dollars, to the several Southern States if the States will take over its operation and maintain its present high standards."

Only One of Kind

Meharry Medical College is the only such institution in the United States which accepts only Negro students. Last year, 52 per cent of all Negro medical students in the country were enrolled here. The school at present has an enrollment of 490. It includes 190-bed Hubbard Hospital, a medical college approved by the American Medical Association, a class "A" dental school and a nursing school.

Caldwell said the Meharry offer would be given first consideration if plans for the program proceed satisfactorily. He said that while technical details are still to be worked out, the committee believed it would be necessary to ask congressional approval before the States entered into the joint educational compact. Action by the various State Legislatures also will be required, he said.

In stressing that today's discussions were not related to racial education problems, Governor Caldwell said several States that are willing to support regional medical colleges for Negroes already have such institutions.

Member States of the Southern Governors Conference are Virginia, North and South Carolina, Georgia, Tennessee, Florida, Alabama, Louisiana, Arkansas, Texas, Maryland, Kentucky, West Virginia and Oklahoma.

Matter Of Fact

By Joseph and Stewart Alsop

The Kremlin And Senator Wherry

AMONG THE AMERICAN experts, the horrified suspicion is mounting that the Kremlin has at last gained a kind of primitive understanding of American politics. The presidential campaign of Henry A. Wallace, which the Communist Party obviously hopes will put a Republican reactionary isolationist in the White House, plainly suggests as much. And now there are reasons for believing that the makers of Russian policy will grant the world a lull—a period of relaxation of tension—while Congress is debating the European Recovery Program.

If true, this latter news is of vital importance. It is not too much to say that Soviet bullying and Soviet aggression have provided the congressional majorities for every major measure of American foreign policy since the end of the war. Either just before or during each debate, the Soviets have said or done just enough to frighten the waverers into supporting each bill, from the British loan down to interim aid.

IN THE CASE of the European Recovery Program, far larger in scale and more far-reaching in importance than any of its predecessors, it was frankly hoped that the Soviets would be particularly helpful. The orations of Andrei Vishinsky at Lake Success during the fall had seemed to set the tone. (The only amusement of the immensely unfunny London Foreign Ministers' meeting was provided by a junior member of the American delegation, who solemnly asked a Russian opposite number whether the Kremlin would object to Vishinsky being offered a high American decoration "for his constant strong support of American policy.") There were many grounds for expecting that after the breakdown of negotiations in London, the Kremlin would quickly follow Vishinsky's words with comparable deeds.

It was expected, in fact, that draconian measures to consolidate Russian power in the Soviet sphere would be combined with aggression against every weak point within reach of Soviet power. While the last vestiges of opposition were crushed out in eastern Europe, pressure was to be intensified upon Greece; the Communist offensives in Italy and France were to be renewed with fury; a campaign for western Germany was to be launched, and so on. At the beginning of December, all the evidence, secret and otherwise, suggested that this was indeed the Kremlin plan. And if this plan were now being executed, the effect upon the Congress would be electric.

In December, however, came the setbacks at Paris and Rome, and shortly thereafter followed the upset of the Greek timetable, when the Greek army recaptured Konitsa from the Communist guerillas. No doubt these events caused the Kremlin to resurvey the situation. And it is now believed that the decision was thus taken to defer further aggressive action for a little in order to let the American Congress forget its sense of urgency and yield to the election year temptation to mangle or defeat the European Recovery Program. Most of the data on which the experts base this tentative conclusion cannot be revealed. The conclusion seems to be supported, however, both by what is known of the Kremlin's more recent directives to the western European Communists and by recent slight changes in the method of Soviet diplomacy.

TO BE SURE, the lull that the world may now hope for will be both brief and very incomplete, if it occurs at all. The preparations for more open aggression—the struggle for key positions from which to paralyze the French and Italian economies; the effort to capture the west German labor movement; the preparations for a larger guerilla effort in Greece—are still being carried on. Because elections are coming in Italy and Czechoslovakia, and because the campaigning season opens in Greece in the spring, the lull can hardly last beyond March.

The expectation simply is that during the two crucial months immediately ahead nothing will be done to frighten the Senators and Representatives out of their obstinate dream of false security. Dramatic stimuli are needed to arouse the present Congress to any genuinely impelling sense of the world realities. Even a little calculated self-control in the Kremlin may be enough to make the Congress lose touch with reality altogether.

If this happens, the dream will soon be rudely broken, to be sure. The defeat or gutting of the Marshall Plan should bring on a British financial crisis in the late spring, followed by liquidation of many British overseas commitments. Simultaneously, events in western Europe must quickly assume a new and terrible tempo. By the time of the party conventions which so obsess the Senators and Representatives, the grim outline of the future should be clear enough to be understood even by Senator Kenneth Wherry, and quite possibly by Senator Homer Capehart. By the time of the November election, the whole country should be aware that congressional politics and congressional isolationism have involved us in an irretrievable world disaster. The authors of the disaster will then receive their just deserts.

BUT THIS WILL BE small consolation indeed, since the disaster will overtake not merely those who are responsible but every American. Under the circumstances, it might be well to consider the other alternative. This is for Secretary of State George C. Marshall to spell out in detail the vague generalities of his statement on the price of inaction. If Secretary Marshall puts all the facts in the record, the Congress will act. On the other hand, the Congress cannot be blamed too much if the Administration will not tell the known truth in concrete, understandable form.

House Group Calls Notables To Hearings on Red Curbs

By The Associated Press

The House Un-American Activities Committee, looking for definite curbs on communism, sent invitations yesterday to prominent lawyers, jurists and authorities on world affairs to lend a hand in studying legislative steps.

A subcommittee which starts hearings February 5 has asked the assistance of such persons as Owen Roberts, former Supreme Court justice; Sumner Welles, former Undersecretary of State, and Attorneys Donald Richberg and Morris Ernst.

Chairman Nixon (R., Calif.) said that probably not all of those invited will be able to testify in person, and some may send statements. He said the committee intends to hear both sides of the question and that a lawyer for the Communist Party will be invited to discuss the legal points involved.

Arthur Garfield Hays, he said, has agreed to appear as attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union. Robert Milam was suggested as a witness by the American Bar Association. He is chairman of the organization's committee on the Bill of Rights.

Nixon said the hearings will last about two weeks and about 40 witnesses will be heard. He has announced that Attorney General Clark will be the first to testify.

The hearings will carry the committee beyond mere exposure of communism and Communists in America.

The letter to Welles, for instance, seeks advice on how anti-Communist legislation might affect the European situation and "the success of the Marshall Plan, if enacted."

Other witnesses already lined up include Louis Waldman, New York lawyer, and a five-man delegation from the District of Columbia Bar Association.

D.C. Building Laws Ignored, Says King

Many Projects Begun Without Permit, Assistant Corporation Counsel Charges

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

Many District builders are violating the law by starting construction before a building permit is actually granted, it was revealed yesterday.

The charge was made by Assistant Corporation Counsel Clark F. King, who has prosecuted a number of persons accused of violating the District Building Code by working without a permit or beyond the limits specified in the permit.

King declared that although it is clearly illegal, many construction men have made it a practice to begin work "as soon as the plans are filed." He charged also that some building men "use lower estimated values" on projects in order to reduce property tax assessments.

Strict Enforcement Favored

King said he favored strict enforcement of permit regulations and was eager to prosecute any violators brought before him by the Inspectors Department.

King said that in the past two months, he has prosecuted "four or five" cases placed before him by the District Inspections Department. These were the first in many months and were about twice the total number handled in 1947.

The chief building inspector, Jesse J. Kimball, echoed Krug's sentiments. Kimball scored the present practice by which "the vast majority" of persons caught operating without a permit escape punishment by applying for a permit.

Kimball, who has been a District employe for the past 16 years, said he felt "anybody violating regulations should be given no alternative until his case is completed by the courts" and punishment is levied. He said "repeated offenders should be treated severely."

Departmental Policy Outlined

Kimball's superior, Director of Inspections, Robert H. Davis, however, said that it has been a departmental policy "for the past few years" to punish guilty parties by foreign cession of work until a permit is obtained.

No fine or jail sentence is requested, Davis explained, unless the violation is a "flagrant one" and "we can build up an ironclad case."

He said that during the war when the War Production Board checked each permit issued, some contractors using black market materials preferred to skip applying for a permit. "It's a matter of getting people back in line again," he explained.

The Washington Post revealed last month that many construction men failed to apply for permits, taking a chance of getting caught rather than wade into a complicated and time-consuming permit calculation snarl. Building men pointed out culprits stood to lose only time on the job until they could get a permit.

Representatives of established and reputable construction firms, however, have made it a standard practice to follow building code regulations on permits, building men have declared.

Owners Also Responsible

The responsibility for getting a permit is not entirely on the shoulders of contractors, Kimball pointed out. He said the building owner should check that permits are actually granted, rather than accept the word of the contractors. The latter might prefer to evade the necessity of obtaining a permit, Kimball noted.

Other steps to improve building safety in the District are under way on several fronts in the wake of the Empire Building collapse:

1. Davis disclosed that he has made several informal recommendations to Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, for changes in the procedure of his department as a result of inquiry into the collapse.

2. The special five-man investigating committee headed by Engineer Stewart Beall is expected to recommend action to prevent a recurrence of the disaster which took the lives of four persons and injured 12. The report will be ready by the end of this week, it was learned yesterday.

License Action Studied

3. Davis said consideration is now being given to more rigid licensing of architects to cover persons now doing the usual work of architects under the title of designers. The licensing of building contractors, which was broached several years ago, has been proposed again, he said.

4. A bill providing for the licensing of engineers was introduced in Congress earlier this month. Davis said it would assure District residents that professional advice was competent and would ease the operation of the inspections department by eliminating time spent in dealing with incompetent or uninformed technicians.

Under the present work load, plans submitted by reputable persons are usually accepted as accurate, Davis said. No check is made of the actual site before issuing a permit, because of the staff personnel shortage, Davis explained.

This means that a person applying for a permit may declare that a proposed opening in a wall is safe because there is no wall supported above it, whereas, in fact, a wall may be located there and its weight may eventually cause a collapse. Such a possibility is now being investigated in connection with the Empire crash, Davis disclosed.

the Fourth Maintenance Squadron at Andrews Field, one of two occupants of the personnel equipment building, was taken to Andrews Field Hospital for treatment of multiple abrasions and shock.

First Lieut. D. H. Stuck, a pilot who had just finished turning in his parachute inside the building, narrowly escaped injury. Staff Sergt. Albert Greene, suffered cut hands in the rescue.

Lieutenant Ryerson, Lieutenant Williams and Sergeant Hovermill were on the training flight as National Guard members.

Miss Lawrence is a stenographer with the Central Intelligence Agency. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lawrence of Flemingsburg, Ky. A sister, Mrs. Jerry Allison, lives at 723 Quincy st. nw. Miss Lawrence came to Washington 18 months ago.

The injured were taken to Bolling Field Hospital, 12 miles away, after receiving first aid.

Rescuers had to climb atop the building to remove Ryerson, Williams and Hovermill from the plane.

Fire that broke out when the plane crashed was quickly extinguished.

The plane apparently developed engine trouble as it was taking off. Pending investigation, officials had no explantion of the crash.

The plane was damaged beyond repair, they said.

Andrews Field personnel drained the plane's gasoline and started removing the wreckage from the torn-open roof of the building as firemen stood by.

Williams Served in Europe

Lieutenant Williams, manager of a hat store, served with the Eighth Air Force in the European theater during the war. After 30 B-17 bomber missions he was transferred to a fighter squadron and was credited with downing two enemy planes. He was awarded the Air Medal with three oak leaf clusters. He lives with a brother at the Connecticut Avenue address.

Sergeant Hovermill, a National Guard mechanic at Andrews Field, served 33 months overseas with the Eighth Air Force and received unit citations. He is the father of a 2-month-old son, and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Hovermill of 10603 S. Dunmoor dr., Silver Spring, Md.

Lieutenant Ryerson, whose wife, Cora, is expecting her first child in the spring, was a special agent of the Royal Insurance Co., Ltd., in Arlington.

During the war he served with the Ninth Air Force bombers section in the European theater and subsequently became one of the first pilots in the reorganized National Guard.

A native of California, he had lived here since 1932. Also surviving him is his mother, Mrs. Warren P. Mercilliott of Key West, Fla.

Fairmac Corp. Hit by Priest that was common among all strikers."

The churchmen's findings, which were noncommittal, were reported to their congregations yesterday. Father Quinn told his congregation that Ziegler said one of Fairmac's reasons for not bargaining was the alleged Communist membership of some union members. He declared:

"Communism is the second greatest danger in our American life. The greatest danger is that big business is becoming bigger and the little businessman is being put out of business." He said, "Our antitrust laws are proving inadequate."

Later, he said he was likening the Fairmac Corp. to "big business" and the strikers to "little business men." He described the labor union as the "only organized defense against big business."

Father Quinn criticized the corporation for refusing to bargain with the union, Building Service Employes Local 82, on the grounds one of the union's employes once belonged to the Communist Party. The company, he said, "refused to deal with the union months before this was revealed."

The other churchmen were the Rev. J. W. Leggett, pastor of the Fairlington Methodist Church; the Rev. E. H. Potts of Fair Park Baptist Church, and the Rev. Darby Betts of St. Clements Episcopal Church.

Trinidad Club Fund Hits $6181

Twenty-five dollars has been given to Trinidad Boys' Club by the Society of Natives of Washington. The amount pushes to $6181.51 the club's operating fund.

Because of the failure of the club's campaign to reach its $10,000 goal, the club will have to dig into its reserves and forego purchase of a planned summer camp site until sufficient funds become available, Fred E. Nalley, jr., executive director, said.

A total of 250 boys participated in the first week of the club's winter program.

One on the Aisle—

Nancy Walker's Ballet

Philly Musical Is Gotham Bound

By Richard L. Coe

PHILADELPHIA. Benjamin Franklin's town is seeing two new plays which both have one more week here before going into New York.

At the Forrest, Nancy Walker is cavorting in "Look, Ma, I'm Dancin'!" a George Abbott-Jerome Robbins parody on the ballet business. In the historic Walnut Street, Oscar Homolka and Jessie Royce Landis are starring in "The Last Dance," a free adaptation of Strindberg's "Dodsdancen" ("The Dance of Death.")

Nancy Walker, who looks like anything but a musical comedy star, proves that she is exactly that in "Look, Ma." As a beer baron's daughter who backs a ballet company so she can dance in the ensemble, Nancy is uproariously funny. Few people in show business can put over a song with Nancy's socko enthusiasm and though the ones she sings may never make the hit parade, they're good production numbers. Two more are being added this week while the show sharpens up for its Broadway onslaught.

But Nancy is very funny indeed as the Lily from Milwaukee who wants to make with the entrechats. Her first act entrance is a minor masterpiece, spouting what she trusts is Russian and leading an enormous wolfhound on a leash. In one number she sings of her minor role in the troupe, "I'm the first girl in the second line" and in another she moans "I'm Tired of Texas." Her best chance comes in a burlesque of all the Russian ballets you've ever seen, "Mlle. Marie."

The Walker Skill

At 26, Nancy is a living example what may result from having been born in a theatrical trunk. She's the daughter of vaudeville's Barto and Mann and her assurance in making the best of what must have seemed unlikely musical comedy attributes is a tribute to what hard work and experience can do. Nancy's short and jut-jawed but she follows up these two strikes with a home-run personality. She listens well (an impression many performers don't always achieve) and she's a grand pantomimist.

We hadn't seen her since she was 19, getting the lion's share of applause in another Abbott musical, "Best Foot Forward." Since then she's done Metro's movie version of that one, as well as "Girl Crazy" and "Broadway Rhythm" for the screen, but the movies haven't really been able to decide what to do with her unique style. Her big stage hit, of course, was "On the Town," which she followed up last year with the not quite successful "Billion Dollar Baby."

Whether "Look, Ma, I'm Dancin'!" will prove as big a hit as the last Walker-Robbins collaboration, "On the Town," depends on how much people expect from this long-touted newcomer.

Ballet World Overtones

For it's generally known to the wiseacres that in "Look, Ma." Robbins is recounting some of his own experiences some years ago in Ballet Theater. The Gotham columnists soon will be yuk-yuking about the resemblance of the real-life story of Ballet Theater's Lucia Chase. Titivating as all this is, it's extraneous to the fact that "Look, Ma" is fun on its own level.

Robbins, who already this season character played by Nancy to the has hit the jackpot with his Mack Sennett ballet for "High Button Shoes," has devised some swell production members. He's got a potpourri of everything in the opening, "Gotta Dance," he has touches of all the choreographers in "Mlle. Marie" and goes it amusingly on his own for a sleepwalking, pajama-clad romp in a railway sleeping car.

Several other performers are outstanding: Harold Lang, a fine dancer, makes much of the Robbins real-life adventurer, and Alice Pearce makes the jump from night clubs to her first stage role with a gleeful performance as a washout who's going to be a Russian ballerina if it kills her.

"Look, Ma" is an immensely enjoyable romp and if you're shuttling to New York this week, a stopover at the Forrest would be a cheerful diversion.

"The Last Dance"

The Strindberg play is the story of a man and wife who have been tormenting each other for 20 years. He is a military man, an egoist, she a perceptive woman no longer in love with him but unable to exist without him, so much has her hatred of him occupied her.

In their adaptation, Peter Goldbaum and Robin Short have attempted to find an ending Strindberg didn't write for this mutual torture and they have succeeded in writing one that is theatrically effective. At the moment, there is still too much palaver in the first act but since a good deal has already been chopped in the first few performances, it's possible more cuts will be made to advantage. By the time "The Last Dance" reaches New York it may achieve the taut quality Director John O'Shaughnessy is striving for.

"The Last Dance" is the first production of a new firm, James Russo, Michael Ellis and Stephen Morrow. Whether their initial venture jells into the performance they have in mind remains for the last week of polishing to show.

Church Divisions Called 'Scandal'

Archbishop From India Urges Study Of 'Groups of Separated Christians'

"The scandal of the divisions of Christendom" was deplored yesterday by Archbishop Mar Ivanios as the annual Church Unity Octave began.

The archbishop, metropolitan of Trivandrum, India, spoke over WTOP's "D. C. Dateline" program, prior to celebrating a high mass according to the Syro-Malankrese rite, at the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception, Catholic University.

In his radio address, originating in the studio, the archbishop declared, in part:

"Although we Catholics believe that God founded only one church for the salvation of all men, and that this church is the Catholic church, we should earnestly strive to learn all we can about the various groups of separated Christians and their particular problems. We must be consumed with fervent charity for all those who, more often than not through no fault of their own, are separated from the unity of Christ's Church."

The archbishop explained he was brought up as a member of the Dissident Orthodox Malankara Church, and afterward commissioned by brother bishops to explore the possibilities of reunion with the Roman church.

"Finally a small group of us was received into the church, he said, "and with the blessing of the Holy Father we Malankara Christians have continued to celebrate our ancient liturgy, to observe our ancient customs, to profess our ancient faith, to venerate the Mother of God, whom we love to call 'The Second Heaven.'"

The Church Unity Octave is an eight-day period of prayer for church unity. The Most Rev. Thomas J. McDonald, national director of the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, and auxiliary Bishop of New York, preached last night and presided at solemn benediction. There will be services daily at 8 p. m. this week, through Sunday night, at the Shrine. The Most Rev. Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic Delegate to the United States, will preside and officiate at solemn benediction tonight.

Anniversaries Marked by Area Churches

Several prominent congregations in the District and Virginia celebrated anniversaries yesterday.

Luther Place Memorial Church, Thomas Circle, marked another phase in its diamond jubilee observance and also the sixty-fifth anniversary of the Martin Luther Statue Association.

Concordia Evangelical and Reformed Church, 20th and G sts. nw., commemorated its 115th birthday. Arlington Forest Methodist Church, Lee blvd. and Henderson rd., Arlington, observed its fifth anniversary.

Martin Luther's "consistent convictions" were cited at Luther Place Church by Dr. Franklin Clark Fry of New York City, president of the United Lutheran Church in America.

Luther's outstanding traits, said Dr. Fry to a congregation of 800, "were his utter reliance on God, his zest for worship and his irrepressible testimony."

The Martin Luther Statue Association was organized in 1883 for the erection and care of the Luther Statue, long a landmark on the triangle known as "Luther Place" at Thomas Circle.

Dr. L. Ralph Tabor, pastor of Luther Place Church, conducted the anniversary services. Dr. Tabor has announced the speaker for February 1 at 5 p. m. will be Dr. S. C. Michelfelder, executive director of the Lutheran World Federation and director of the World Council of Churches' reconstruction department.

Mission Pleas Made in Many D. C. Churches

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Sermons urging support of missions were heard in many Greater Washington area churches yesterday.

The D. C. Baptist Convention of Churches initiated its annual World Mission Week, with home and foreign missionaries and other guest speakers.

Collections for missionary work here and abroad were received in the 67 parishes of the Washington Catholic Archdiocese. The appeal was sponsored by the Archdiocesan Society for the Propagation of the Faith, of which the director is the Rev. Russell A. Phelan, assistant pastor of St. Ann's Church, Tenley cir. and Wisconson ave. nw.

Emphasizing the missionary cause in his sermon during masses at St. Ann's Church, Father Phelan pointed out that 60 per cent of the offering would go to foreign missions and 40 per cent to home missions.

Father Phelan said the funds, to be disbursed by Pope Pius XII, would be used for reconstruction of war-damaged churches in the Pacific and European areas, and for food, clothing and other necessities for the needy in Europe. Many orphanages, hospitals and other institutions are desperately in need of help, he stated. Similar pleas were made in other parishes.

Typical of the Baptist foreign speakers was Miss Lydia Crawford, medical missionary stationed in the city of Ipin, Province of Sxechuan, western China.

Speaking at Fifth Baptist Church, 609 E st. sw., Miss Crawford told a dramatic story of how 60 million Chinese of all ages and classes fled from the China coast during the war into the province where she was stationed.

"These refugees — particularly the educated Christian ones—have done a tremendous job in building up the spiritual life of our province. It will never go back to being what it was before the war," she said.

Miss Crawford, formerly a nurse in Boston and Lynn, Mass., spent 38 years in China. She is on sick leave.

Missionaries and other Baptist figures wil speak in Washington area Baptist churches today through Friday at 8:15 p. m. Daily noon luncheons for missionaries and local pastors will be held today through Friday at Metropolitan Baptist Church, 6th and A sts. ne.

Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, is chairman of the committee for "World Mission Week." The Rev. Frank Brasington, director of the D. C. Baptist Convention's City Missions Department, is directing the project. The visiting missionaries, with several local Baptist leaders, will go to the White House Wednesday at noon.

Members of Foundry Methodist Church, 16th and P sts. nw., last night heard a sermon by the Rev. Earl M. Rugg, for 32 years missionary to India.

HERE'S WHY
15% LESS HEATING OIL
THIS WINTER

The heating oil supply situation is critical. Unless you and all other users of heating oil burn 15% less than normal during January, February and March, your home may be cold! Today the industry's production is the greatest in history—BUT—still not enough to meet the record demand. To save your 15%, take these steps now: Set thermostat at 68°... turn down to 60° at night or when away.. keep radiators off in all unused rooms. use fireplace whenever possible — keep flues closed when not in use.

Time for Common Sense

An Open Letter to The Congress of The United States

In the next few days the Congress will be asked to consider legislation to extend the shutdown of American distillers. Since this involves an industry which pays annually more than two and a half billion dollars in taxes, and employs directly and indirectly more than two million American workers, we think it might be useful for you and for the public to have some of the facts about the recent voluntary 60-day shutdown.

Schenley entered into the voluntary agreement and has lived up to its obligations 100 per cent.

Some American distillers did not shut down.

The Canadian distillers did not shut down.

The British distillers did not shut down.

No other country in the world closed its distilleries.

For the announced purpose of providing food for hungry people in Europe, the shutdown has been an absolute, costly, and utter failure.

The purpose of our government was to save wheat. We believe that not only was there no saving of wheat, but that wheat was actually lost.

The distilling industry uses practically no wheat. The actual figure is less than one thousandths of one per cent of the total wheat crop.

This industry uses principally corn, some rye and some barley malt. Most of this grain, if not so used, would ordinarily be fed to animals.

Normally, we use about 2 per cent of the total corn crop.

It was estimated by the President's Food Committee that the 60-day shutdown would save approximately ten million bushels of grain, but actually little or nothing was saved because in the process of distilling we return to the farmer feeds for poultry, hogs, dairy cattle and beef cattle which in the opinion of experts have an equal or greater feeding value than the grain we used.

We take out only the starch. We save all the protein and oil and add yeast. The resulting products are rich in protein, vitamins, amino acids and other feed values.

We are convinced that the final result is this—if a farmer has ten bushels of grain and sells us two bushels for distilling, and then feeds the eight bushels which he kept and the residue which we return to him, he will get as much added weight in feeding his animals as he would have achieved if he had fed them the original ten bushels.

We think he actually gets more.

Suffice it to say that the benefits of a balanced diet have been proved over and over again for both animals and human beings.

Our own Department of Agriculture, in numerous bulletins, has published many formulas for the use of distillers feeds to balance animal diets.

We admit, frankly, that the exact percentage of feeding value which we return to the economy is debatable.

You may think that instead of being more, it is even as much as fifty per cent less. Let's assume that you sincerely believe that the Luckman plan saved five million bushels of corn, or less than one tenth of one per cent of the total grain available.

But it wasn't corn the government wanted to ship abroad. It was wheat.

We knew that our feeds would add weight to cattle, but the government apparently was not interested in getting more meat. Now the Secretary of Agriculture tells the country that we are faced with a terrible meat shortage. It does get a little confusing, doesn't it, gentlemen?

In addition, we think they lost more wheat than they thought they saved.

When the farmer doesn't get our feed do you honestly believe he is going to let his poultry and hogs and cattle starve?

And maybe this particular farmer hasn't any corn. Maybe he has wheat. So he feeds the wheat to the chickens and hogs and cattle—and it was wheat that we wanted in the first place to ship to Europe.

The government of every country in the world, except our own, has adopted the principle that distilling takes nothing away from the food economy. This is proved by the fact that none of these governments have shut down their distilleries. Surely they are not purposely taking food out of the mouths of starving people.

England is running at capacity; Canada is running at capacity; eleven countries which have submitted their needs under the Marshall plan, have asked for grain for distilling and brewing.

Even assuming that the shutdown saved a few million dollars worth of corn, let's see what it cost:

It completely dislocated an industry which pays to the Federal and State governments more than two and one-half billion dollars a year in taxes.

It threw thousands of American workers out of work. We know because we alone kept more than one thousand on full pay.

It increased the price of the neutral grain spirits now in storage in the United States more than 150 per cent.

It opened the door wide for foreign distillers and foreign workers to take over the business of American distillers and the jobs of American workers.

We admit that these are strong statements, but we will prove every one of them right up to the hilt.

There is one other fact that ought to be clarified. The public was told that the stocks of whiskey in the U. S. were adequate—that we have over 550 million gallons of whiskey. What we have, actually, is about 65 million gallons of whiskey in this country which is four years old or older. This is about one year's supply. The rest is green whiskey not yet fit to drink. (Government figures show what is put away—not what is there after evaporation and outage.)

This is less aged whiskey per capita than in any distilling country on the whole face of the globe.

Now you may well ask us why we agreed voluntarily to shut down when we knew all of these facts and had communicated them to the Luckman committee.

We assented because we were conscious of an obligation to the American people, who decided in 1933 that they would prefer to have a sound distilling industry with employment and taxes and government regulation instead of bootleggers, gunmen and rot-gut. They put that in our Constitution.

So, when the call came to help hungry people, we wanted to contribute our share, heaped up and running over. We knew no grain would be saved, but when we were told that a great sacrifice on our part would be a tremendous psychological contribution for the purpose of securing assent from others to make comparable sacrifices, we agreed.

No other American industry was asked to make any comparable sacrifice.

No other country asked its distillers to make any sacrifice.

We think it is time for a little common sense.

We think this whole question of the shutdown of distillers and the allocation of grain for restriction of production should be investigated by the Congress of the United States. Not in an hour, not in a day but in a full dress hearing with opportunity for all to be heard. Not just distillers, but the communities that are being ruined, the workers who are being thrown out of work and the farmers who have an interest in the feeding of their stock and the disposition of their products.

We believe that the public interest would be best served by full disclosure of all the facts in the full light of day.

Kitts Quits as VPI Football Coach

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE OTHER DAY when Early Wynn signed a contract with the Washington club that called for an $18,000 salary for 1948 and took rank as the highest paid player on the team, it was the end of a long haul for the robust righthander.

POVICH

Ten years before he had walked into the Sanford, Fla., training camp of Washington's Chattanooga farm team, with a glove dangling from the belt that held up his blue jeans, and said he was a pitcher. He had come from Alabama, not with the proverbial banjo on his knee, but with a baseball heritage. His father used to pitch in the old South Atlantic League.

He wasn't sponsored when he ambled into the Chattanooga training camp. Nobody had scouted him, nobody had invited him. He just walked in and said he was a pitcher, and would they let him pitch a little? Manager Clyde Milan, a kind fellow, said, "Go ahead, kid." Milan watched, and that night he was off to Hartford, Ala., to get the signature of Wynn's mother on a contract that would legalize the signing of the 17-year-old lad.

CLARK GRIFFITH never negotiates any salary terms with Wynn. He merely looks Wynn up and down, surveys him like a weight guesser at a carnival, puts a figure in the contract and hands Wynn a pen. Wynn's weight is Griffith's chief winter worry. He's impatient with Wynn's easy habit of taking on poundage in the off-season. When Wynn walked into Griffith's office the other day, comparatively svelt and apparently in shape, it was worth a couple of extra thousand dollars to him in his contract.

There never was much question of Wynn's ability to pitch and win games. He could throw a fast ball from the time he reported to the Washington club. In later years he had come up with not only a curve, but also a change of pace and even a blooper ball that Buck Newsom taught him.

Perhaps it's the Indian in him, but he's an unemotional workman. You can't tell by looking at him or the way he walks off the mound after a game whether he's just won a nice one or lost a tough one. Seemingly, it doesn't make any difference to Wynn, but actually he seethes when he drops one.

IT'S REASONABLE enough that Wynn commands the biggest salary on the Washington club. He's the team's No. 1 pinch hitter in addition to being its top pitcher. He takes his hitting seriously, and it was revealed last year when he quarreled with the official scorer's decision on one of his blows that he gets a bonus from Griffith based on his batting average.

The paradox is that Wynn, when he was first farmed out by the Washington club after a brief trial in 1939, he irked Manager Bucky Harris not so much by the greenness of his pitching, but by his actions as a hitter. And he tells the story himself:

"I was pitching a pretty good game against Cleveland. We were a run behind, about 5 to 4, in the late innings, when we got men on first and second with nobody out. Harris asked me if I could bunt, and I said I was a damn good bunter. He told me to lay one down. I didn't exactly lay it down. What I bunted was a line drive to Keltner, and the Indians turned it into a triple play. Harris sent me back to Charlotte that night."

HARRIS HASN'T ALWAYS held Wynn in such low esteem. It must have been a satisfaction to Wynn to read last month that the Yankees were offering Washington five players, plus cash, for his contract. "If we had Wynn, we could laugh at the Red Sox," Harris said ruefully after the deal fell through.

When Wynn isn't playing ball, he sells Packard cars and motorboat engines for his father-in-law in Riverdale, Md. Griffith vetoed his plan to go to Florida a month ahead of the team this year. "In Florida last year he got fat and lazy before the training camp opened," said the Washington owner.

Wynn has never been a 20-game winner. He came close to it in 1943 when he came up with 18 victories. Griffith doesn't rate Wynn as a 20-game winner. "He ought to win 25 in any year he has much luck, and keeps his weight down to 190."

Harrison's 273 Wins Richmond

Richmond, Calif., Jan. 18 (AP).—Carding a one-under-par 71 on his final round, E. J. (Dutch) Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., won the $10,000 Richmond golf tournament today with a 72-hole total of 273.

The self-styled Arkansas Traveler, one of the top 10 in the country, shot sub-par golf throughout the tournament to bag first prize of $2000. He led after every round with scores of 65, 67, 70, 71.

A crowd of more than 7500 fans watched the big fellow from the Ozarks drop a 2-foot putt for a birdie 4 on the last hole to take top money.

He was out in 35, and home in 36 against the par 37, 35—72 Richmond course.

Second money of $1400 was won by Jimmy Demaret of Ojai, Calif., who charged home with a 6 under par 66 and a total 275.

Ed Furgol, Pontiac, Mich., with a final 67, nished third with 277. Chandler Harper of Portsmouth, Va., took fourth with 278, chalking up a last round 67.

Five sharpshooters, including South Africa's Bobby Locke of Johannesburg and long hitter Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., tied for fifth at 279.

The others were Skip Alexander of Mid-Pines, N. C., who scored a hole in one on the 133-yard par 3 second today to help his cause; Jim Milward of Northernaire, Wis., making an eagle 2 on the 398-yard thirteenth, and Douglas Ford of New York. (Ford, low amateur in the field, played in the company of Harrison and equaled the winner's 71.)

Lew Worsham, of Washington, D. C., defending National Open Champion, who had a 210 before today's round, withdrew.

Last year's Richmond winner, George Schoux of San Bruno, Calif., shot 280 to tie with Henry Ransom, Ravinia, Ill. Schoux took the 1947 championship with a 268 but the course then was a par-71 test.

Former United States Open Champion Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles, victim of poor putting, finished with 281.

The 282-bracket included Cary Middlecoff, Memphis; John Palmer, Badin, N. C., and Leland Gibson of Kansas City, Mo.

Foreign entries, aside from Locke, ended up as follows: Stan Leonard, Vancouver, B. C., 283; Norman von Nida, Sydney, Australia, 284; Robert de Vincenzo, Rosario, Argentina, 289; Martin Pose, Buenos Aires, 291; Enrique Bertolino, Buenos Aires, 292.

'Best for All Concerned,' Jimmy Says

Blacksburg, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—James R. (Jimmy) Kitts, the drawling Texan who became head football coach at Virginia Polytechnic Institute here in 1941, resigned that post today because of what he termed "misfortunate happenings that occurred last year."

Kitts, whose three-year contract had another year to run, declined to comment further on the "misfortunate happenings . . ." but added that "I think it best for all concerned that I tender my resignation as head football coach at Virginia Polytechnic Institute."

W. L. (Monk) Younger, Tech's athletic director, said the athletic council had accepted the resignation. Younger made no comment regarding Kitts' successor.

Flashback—

On October 31, 1947, six days after signs demanding his ouster as head football coach were found on the V.P.I. campus, Jimmy Kitts told The Washington Post:

"I have gotten along with my players, students and faculty. I have reason to believe that the signs around the school . . . were put up by a few rabid alumni who were dissatisfied.

"My contract has another year to run and there has been no indication to me that it will be terminated before it expires. In fact, school officials have reiterated their confidence in my coaching."

Students Raise Uproar

Dissatisfaction over "the present coaching staff" had been expressed by students and alumni during the 1947 football season on two or three occasions.

On October 25, the day of Tech's homecoming, the field house and administration building sidewalks were painted with such signs as, "we've got the material; we need the builders," "we need a new coaching staff" and "give Kitts a free hand."

That afternoon the Gobblers almost upset Maryland, finally going down, 21-19.

After that, Tech went on a three-game winning streak, thrashing George Washington, Washington and Lee and the University of Richmond before Thanksgiving Day brought a humiliating 28-14 defeat at the hands of the Gobblers' bitterest rival, Virginia Military Institute, a team that won only two previous games.

First Year Best

Before the Maryland battle, Tech had beaten Furman, then bowed to three straight foes, 41-7 to Virginia; 21-7 to William and Mary, and 40-0 to Army.

Kitts, who was brought to Tech to rekindle the school's football fortunes, had his best season the first year—1941. His team won seven and lost three. Among the victories was a 3-0 upset of Georgetown.

After that first year, Kitts entered the Navy and didn't return until the 1946 grid campaign. His 1946 outfit reached its peak midway during the season when the Gobblers surprised perhaps even themselves by upsetting a previously sunbeaten North Carolina State eleven.

Although they won only three games, the Gobblers of that year became the first Virginia team ever to play in a postseason football classic, Kitts' charges losing to the University of Cincinnati in the Sun Bowl at El Paso, Texas, January 1, 1947.

Only Six Major Teams Still Unbeaten

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—A team has to be good—and lucky—to reach this stage of the college basketball season with an unbeaten record.

Six major teams—all in the East—have had the right combination in all their games so far and six coaches have their fingers crossed tightly.

Duquesne (12-0) heads the list followed by New York University, Columbia and LaSalle of Philadelphia, all 11-0, and Rhode Island State and Fordham, each 9-0.

Iowa (9-1), Georgia (11-2), and North Carolina (12-2) bowed to the inevitable during the past week, the Hawkeyes losing to Wisconsin's Big Nine pacesetters; Georgia to Auburn and Alabama, and North Carolina to NYU and then Temple.

Six More Small Ones

Among the smaller schools at least six still can boast of all-conquering quintets. Rocky Mountain College, a new institution playing its first season, has a 17-0 slate. Roanoke and Salem (W. Va.) each has 9-10, Potsdam (N. Y.) Teachers 5-0 and Shippensburg (Pa.), 4-0.

Among those teams defeated once are some of the highest rated quintets in the country.

They include Bradley (17-1), Kentucky and Tulane (14-1), Texas (13-1), Oklahoma A. & M. (12-1), Kansas State and Western Kentucky (11-1), Seton Hall (10-1), Iowa, St. Louis and Muhlenbuerg (9-1). Other once-beaten squads include Kirksville (Mo.) (15-1), Carbondale (Ill.), (10-1), Colgate (6-1), and Trinity (Conn.) (6-1).

Here's the picture by regions:

EAST: Ivy League—Columbia (3-0) and Cornell (3-0), and Princeton (2-0). Duquesne, NYU, Columbia, LaSalle, Rhode Island and Fordham top the better clubs in the section with their unbeaten records. Close bhind are Seton Hall, Muhlenberg, Colgate, West Virginia (6-2), Long Island U. (9-3), Cony (9-3), Holy Cross (9-3), Manhattan (10-4), Loyola of Baltimore (10-4), and Villanova (6-3).

SOUTH: Southeastern Conference—Tulane (6-0), Kentucky (1-0). Kentucky and Tulane have 14-1 seasonal records. Georgia is 11-2 and Tennessee 9-3.

Slow Week for Teams

Catholic, Mt. St. Marys Meet Tonight in Only Area Contest

Catholic University and Gallaudet take over the local basketball burden this week with exams keeping the major teams pretty much occupied.

Georgetown and George Washington each play only one game and Maryland won't be in action until January 31 against Army at West Point.

Catholic U., with a record of 6-4, plays three Mason-Dixon Conference rivals.

The Cardinals meet Mt. St. Mary's at C. U. tonight and move over to Western Maryland tomorrow night. Third Conference foe of the week for Gene Augustderfer's boys will be Randolph-Macon at Ashland, Va.

Gallaudet, also a Mason-Dixon member, travels to Towson, Md., tomorrow night and entertains Elizabethtown here Friday night.

The National Guard Armory will be the scene of Georgetown's and George Washington's games on Saturday. Originally, a doubleheader was scheduled with GW meeting Navy and Hoyas facing Texas Wesleyan.

When the twin bill program was cancelled, Georgetown was unable to get a suitable substitute date and will play the Texans in an afternoon game starting at 3:30.

In the night game, at 8:30, Navy will be out to average the upset handed it by the Colonials last season. GW scored a 43-38 victory to hand Navy its only defeat in the regular season. Len Small led that attack when he dropped 17 points.

Navy's squad this year isn't nearly as strong. Villanova already has trounced the Middies, 61-39, and Ben Carnevale's squad was lucky to get by Maryland, 51-47. Saturday, Rutgers defeated it, 63-53.

Gilmer Here For Redskin Salary Talks

Harry Gilmer came to Washington last night, it was revealed by the Redskin management, and immediately was closeted with Coach Turk Edwards in a contract conference which was expected to end some time today.

What the Alabama passing wizard, voted by the Redskins most likely to succeed Slingin' Sammy Baugh, will draw in the way of salary was strictly a guess.

And guesses varied from a $100,000 for five years deal to one in which the lanky ace would receive "more money than Baugh."

The fact is that Gilmer, according to Redskin Owner George Marshall, already has a perfect understanding with the Washington professional boss and his contract signing is in the nature of a formality.

Another item to be discussed by the Redskins today is a preseason exhibition with the Chicago Bears in Birmingham, Ala. Bo Russell, former Redskin placement expert, heads a group of Alabamans who want the Redskins, if they bring Gilmer, to appear in the Southern city before the start of the 1948 season.

Baseball! What's That?

Blackwell's Diet of Idleness Adds 20 Pounds to Frame

San Dimas, Calif., Jan. 18 (AP).—The "Life of Riley" could be rephrased "The Life of Blackwell" in this southern California community.

For Ewell Blackwell, leading National League pitcher in 1947, is loafing, enjoying life and growing fat this winter. His sole accomplishments in this oft-season have been:

Signing a contract with the Cincinnati Reds for approximately $23,000; adding 20 pounds to his former 175-pound, 6-foot 6-inch frame; golfing, fishing, painting it kitchen at his parents' home here and kibitzing at sporting events. He hasn't touched a baseball since last October.

Blackwell thinks the added weight will help him, a thought which will be bad news to National League batters. Last year he won 22 games, including six shutouts, one a no-hitter, struck out 193, was never beaten at night, went the distance 23 times and chalked up a neat 2.43 earned run average.

But in winning eight night games and losing none, the lean righthander does not care for the under-the-lights contests.

"That night air wrecks you," he complains. "I'm always stiff as a board the next morning and feeling lousy. But after throwing a day game I feel fine."

His effectiveness last season was shown by the records. Ralph Kiner of Pittsburgh and Johnny Mize of New York, who belted 51 home runs apiece, were held to a grand total of one when they faced Blackwell's offerings. Kiner got it.

He isn't too optimistic about the Reds' chances in '48 "unless we happen to get hot," seeing Boston, St. Louis and Brooklyn as the National League "big three." "And Boston in the American easy unless Spud Chandler and Charley Keller help the Yankees."

Richmond Open Winners Unpaid

Richmond, Calif., Jan. 18 (AP). Twenty golf professionals won a total of $10,000 in prize money today in the Richmond tourament but, because of a lawsuit, they were not paid here.

To avoid possible attachment of the funds, due to the law suit filed in behalf of three Negro players who were denied permission to play by the Professional Golfers' Association "noncaucasian" rule, the winners were merely told the amounts they had won.

What became of the money was a secret but it was reported the money winners will be paid during the Phoenix Open, which starts in the Arizona City next Thursday.

Fulks Scores 23 Against Bullets

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (AP).—The Philadelphia Warriors staved off a last ditch rally last night to whip the Baltimore Bullets, 79-77, for the second straight night in the Basketball Association of America.

Behind as much as 13 points during the game, the Bullets pulled up to within 75-74 with three minutes to go. But four fouls by the Warriors enabled them to ease off with the victory.

Joe Fulks, the Association's leading point maker, dropped in 23 to take game honors while Mike Bloom led the losers with 18.

Tech Gridders Honored Tonight

The Alumni Circle T Club, Tech High School graduate athletic group, will honor the school's championship football squad at a dinner in the Touchdown Club, 1414 Eye st. nw., at 7:30 o'clock tonight.

The banquet, the first given by the alumni organization, will be part of the regular quarterly meeting of the club.

Hialeah Slates Two Big Races; Armed Is Favorite

Miami, Fla., Jan. 18 (AP).—Two $10,000 handicap events share the spotlight on this week's program at Hialeah race course, with Calumet Farm's mighty Armed slated as the prima donna.

Seventeen distance runners have been named in the $10,000 added Royal Palm Handicap for 3-year-olds and upward to be run Wednesday.

Sanford Stud's Round View, winner of the Royal Palm last year, has been assigned top weight of 122 pounds for the mile and furlong test.

Favored, however, is Harmonica, owned by the estate of the late John J. Watts, which captured a $10,000 added distance feature at Gulfstream this season.

Armed, the world's second-ranking money-earning race horse, has been nominated for the $10,000 added Palm Beach Stakes to be run Saturday in a bid for redemption after a surprising and humiliating defeat by Rampart in the rich Gulfstream Handicap last week.

Faultless, Armed's stablemate, also has been nominated to run in the 7-furlong sprint.

Betty Jameson Wins at Tampa

Tampa, Fla., Jan. 18 (AP).—National Open Champion Betty Jameson, taking cold, rain and murky weather in stride, won the $3000 Tampa Women's Open Golf tournament with a seven over par 307 today after leading all the way.

The San Antonio, Texas, pro carded rounds of 77 and 79 today to finish four strokes ahead of National Amateur Champion Louise Suggs of Atlanta.

Third place went to the veteran Patty Berg, Minneapolis pro with 157-77-78—312.

Peggy Kirk of Findlay, Ohio, placed second to Miss Suggs among the amateurs despite an up-and-down card, 158-82-77—317.

The pro-amateur order of finish continued to alternate as Mary Mozel, pro from Portland, Oreg., took fifth with 156-78-83—320; and Grace Lenczyk, Stetson University amateur from Newington, Conn., had 162-82-77—321 for sixth.

Layne Paces Win Over East

Los Angeles, Jan. 18 (AP).—Bobby Layne, University of Texas star, ran and passed the West to an easy 34 to 20 triumph over the East today in a college all-star game that attracted a meager crowd of 3083.

Pitted in a passing duel against Jug Girard of Wisconsin in a hastily promoted exhibition, the Longhorn from Dallas piloted his mates to a 21-6 lead at half-time and the West coasted the rest of the way.

The East scored in the first quarter on a pass, good for 67 yards, from Girard to Michigan's Lenny Ford, and the last two came in the last three minutes of the game as the West relaxed.

Layne passed for 36 yards to Jake Leicht of Oregon for one touchdown, scored one in person from the three, and set up two more with his aerial artistry.

Mickey McCardle of Southern California, relieving Layne in the third period, threw successive strikes of 13, 37 and 17 yards, the last to his Trojan teammate, Gordon Gray, for one of the West's scores. Tom Fears of UCLA converted four of the touchdowns.

The second East score followed two interference penalties, the second giving them the ball on the one, where Girard plunged over.

Tony Minisi of Pennsylvania uncorked runs of 35 and 18 yards in the final minute and then passed the final five to Michigan's Bob Mann for the last East tally.

Lots of Coaches Without Jobs and Jobs Without Coaches, and Leahy's at a Premium

NEW YORK, Jan. 18 (U.P.).There were a lot of coaches without jobs and a lot of jobs without coaches tonight, but the business of bringing them all together was getting complicated.

Both professional and college teams were involved, and the only thing definite was that Notre Dame's Frank Leahy has been mentioned as a possible man for everyone of the major vacancies.

The major college jobs open were at Harvard, Colorado, Yale, Navy, West Virginia and St. Louis U. Virginia Polytechnic Institute also is without a successor to Jimmy Ketts.

The pro vacancies were with the Detroit Lions, the Chicago Rockets, the Los Angeles Dons and the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Harvard and Yale both seemed afar from their solution. Colorado had Dudley DeGroot, resigned coach of the professional Dons, at the top of its list as it sought a man to fill the shoes of Jim Yeager, who quit to go into business.

Navy presented the grandest guessing game of all, and it started the moment Capt. Tom Hamilton was promoted to athletic director. The latest report had Don Faurot ready to resign at Missouri, but this is one of those spots where Leahy, too, is being talked about.

West Virginia and St. Louis both were reported quietly whittling down their lists. The Denver Post said that Bernie Masterson was quitting at Nebraska to go to St. Louis, and that Bernie Bierman had been offered the Nebraska post.

On the professional front, college coaches seemed to have the edge on the vacant jobs. The new ownership of the Detroit Lions made no secret that it was out to get Leahy. The Chicago Rockets seemed to be eyeing Ed McKeever, now of San Francisco University.

The Dons reportedly eyed Jimmy Phelan, the personably and venerable mentor of St. Mary's. And the Dodgers sought to get Lou Little of Columbia.

Kiner Draws $30,000

Pittsburgh, Jan. 18 (AP).—Ralph Kiner, the Pittsburgh Pirates' home-run slugger, today signed a one-year contract for the 1948 season at what General Manager Roy Hamey said was "in the neighborhood of $30,000."

Kiner, who tied big John Mize of the Giants for the 1947 National League home-run leadership with 51, said he was "very happy to return to Pittsburgh and very satisfied" with his contract.

The 6-foot 1-inch Californian came to Pittsburgh today to confer with Hamey and signed up after a short conference. In 1946 he was the league's home-run king with 23 circuit clouters.

McNeil Ranks No. 1 in East

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Don McNeill, Orange (N. J.) former national men's singles champion, has been given the No. 1 Eastern tennis ranking tonight for the second straight year by the Eastern Lawn Tennis Association at its twenty-sixth annual meeting.

The No. 1 ranking in the women's singles went to Miss Betty Rosenquest of South Orange, N. J., who was ranked third a year ago.

Indians Too Entertaining

West Springfield, Mass., Jan. 18 (AP).—The West Springfield board of selectmen yesterday imposed a $500 "entertainment" tax on Eddie Shore, who leases a portion of the tax-exempt eastern states exposition grounds for his Springfield American Hockey League club.

Player Fund Upped

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Directors of the American association today voted to increase the players' bonus fund of the Triple A minor baseball league by 50 per cent, boosting the fund to approximately $30,000.

The total is split among the four teams making the playoffs.

DEAR FOLKS: At Hialeas.

Looks as if the track which will profit most from the 1948 New Jersey racing dates is not even in the State. Delaware Park gets the big break, the Jersey boys inserting a 1-day lapse to allow the duPont oval to operate unopposed. True, Delaware Park will conflict the last part of June and early July with Monmouth Park, a track far to the north and a far cry from Atlantic City, which bucked Delaware last year. The choice of Garden State as the track to run against Havre de Grace and Pimlico, as I see it, is a deliberate attempt to cut down betting at the Camden plant. Last season the State of New Jersey had a graduating scale of betting "take" and Garden State was accused of doing a lot of things aimed to keep the betting under a certain figure. The daily double was shelved, mutuel windows were closed early, and so forth. Garden State is bound to "suffer" when opposed to Havre de Grace. Both depend on Philadelphia for customers. Of course Camden, closer to that city, will draw the bulk of the play. Then, too, the bucking of Pimlico, which has the Preakness and generally a better grade of horses, will cut down Garden State's handle. Atlantic City gets what it wants in vacation dates. Monmouth, also a resort track, goes against New York plants—a situation it always took for granted. Havre de Grace could shift half its meeting back into September and oppose Atlantic City. But, any way you look at it, Maryland appears caught in the middle. —BILL.

High Schools Play Record 57 Games This Week

Wednesday, Friday Are Big Nights

By Herb Heft
Post Reporter

The high school basketball teams of the Greater Washington area are in for a record breaking week.

Fifty-seven games, comprising the largest schedule of the season, are on tap for the schoolboy fans, and important court programs on Wednesday, Friday and Sunday are expected to bring out the largest crowds of the year.

On Wednesday night, Ritchie Coliseum in College Park, Md., will be the scene of a double-header pitting two of Washington's better teams against two of the best in Prince Georges County. In the first game, Calvin Coolidge plays Bladensburg and Greenbelt takes on Gonzaga.

It's the first time Prince Georges County officials have invited the District schools to partake in their weekly double-headers at Ritchie, and they made a good choice in Coolidge and Gonzaga.

The two have large student followings that might bring the crowd to 3500 Wednesday night.

There are two big attractions Friday night. At Ritchie, Montgomery-Blair and Bethesda-Chevy Chase renew their Montgomery County rivalry.

Both have imposing records. A crowd of 3000 will probably be on hand to see Blair risk its 4-1 record against B.-C. C.'s 6-2.

The interhigh league will be out to break, for the third straight Friday night, the basketball attendance record for the National Guard Armory.

The first night interhigh double-header at the armory drew 3121 fans, more than had turned out to see any of the college plays there. Last Friday, 3159 were on hand.

This Friday night, Eastern's Ramblers and Western's Red Raiders, tied for first place, risk their perches against two of their stanchest challengers.

The Ramblers, conquerors of Coolidge and Anacostia, face Central's Vikings, who after losing to Wilson, upset strong McKinley Tech last week.

The Red Raiders face their neighborhood rivals from Woodrow Wilson. Wilson has beaten Central, and was upset by a spirited Roosevelt quintet last week.

On Sunday, St. John's and Gonzaga meet head on in the first of the two games that will most likely decide the Catholic high championship. St. John's has won five out of six and Gonzaga four out of five so far. Their Sunday meeting at the Armory will also attract around 3000.

Pancho May Steal the Show From Riggs and Kramer

By Roger Wolbarst
Post Reporter

WASHINGTON TENNIS fans at Uline Arena Thursday night will see the most colorful tennis player in the world today.

It's not Bobby Riggs or Jack Kramer.

The young man referred to is Pancho Segura, a little ball of dynamite from Guayaquil, Ecuador. It isn't only Pancho's two-handed grip that makes him a crowd pleaser.

It's his flaming personality, which bubbles forth whether he's winning or losing. When Pancho makes a poor shot he moans in a voice that all can hear, "Oh, Pancho," and clasps his head in his hands with woe.

Pancho bounces about the court like a rubber ball. He just can't stand still for a moment. The squat Latin can run like a deer, and he tries for everything. There's no such word as quit in Pancho's vocabulary.

Segura started his tennis career as a ball boy at the swank Guayaquil Club in his native land. A skinny little fellow, he had trouble swinging a regulation size tennis racquet when he tried playing after the members of the club had gone home.

Pancho was a little discouraged, so his father suggested that Pancho emulate Babe Ruth and use both hands on the racquet. The 12-year-old stripling tried this method, and he uses it to this day.

Arriving in the United States in 1940, Pancho had trouble adjusting his game to grass courts, but after a year's practice he was ready to go.

Enrolling at the University of Miami, Pancho captured the United States Intercollegiate singles championship three straight years, a feat unequalled in modern times.

In 1946 the stocky Ecuadorian captured the United States Indoor Singles title, downing one of America's top amateurs, Don McNeil, in the final round.

Together with Frankie Parker, Segura has twice been on the winning side against the world's top doubles team, Kramer and Ted Schroeder. In his time he has beaten almost every high ranking player in the amateur ranks.

Thursday night he'll face Dinny Pails, the Australian champion before Riggs and Kramer take the court.

And it will be "oh Pancho."

AAU Boxing Begins Feb. 10

The annual District AAU boxing tournament will begin February 10 at Turner's Arena and continue weekly until March 25, Chairman Jerry Looney announced.

This year's entries are expected to exceed the record of 124 boys who participated in 1947. As in past tournaments, winners will be crowned in the novice and senior divisions, with the latter group going to Boston to compete in the Nationals.

Boston winners automatically will qualify for the final Olympic trials.

An age limit has been set in the novice class—no boy who has reached his nineteenth birthday will be eligible.

Entry blanks will be available next week.

St. John's Wins, 53 to 24

St. John's Cadets captured an easy 53-34 victory over LaSalle School of Cumberland, Md., yesterday at LaSalle.

It was the seventh victory against one defeat for St. John's, who stepped out to a 12-6 first quarter lead and increased this margin throughout the game.

Jack George, with 11 points, led the winners' offensive, and Coach Bill Gallagher pulled his first team in favor of the reserves in the third period.

Cooper, Pucci Box Tonight At Turner's

Jimmy Cooper, the little perpetual motion machine faces the toughest opponent of his brief professional career when he meets Frankie Pucci, Canadian bantamweight tonight at Turner's Arena.

Pucci has beaten some good boxers, including Benny May, Archie DeVino, Jimmy Jeanette, Ralph LaSalle, George Wright and Willie Alexander, and lays claim to the Canadian Bantamweight crown.

Handled by Bill Daly, who seems to have a knack for developing good fighters—Lee Savold and Pat Comiskey are two of his better known proteges—Pucci is a capable fighter.

Cooper Unbeaten

In Cooper, he will be meeting a youngster who has yet to taste defeat in the professional ranks. Jimmy has been a feature performer in two bouts previous to tonight's.

He kayoed Puggy King in the best fight seen at Turner's in the last few seasons on his initial feature opportunity, then won a hard-fought bout over Orlando Fernandez, a highly regarded southern boxer.

The ease with which Cooper adapted himself to the eight-round route demonstrates his unusual staying power. Jimmy is a constantly moving hard-to-hit target, and he goes over to the offensive in spurts. When he attacks he throws punches from all angles and with amazing speed.

His best punch is his left jab, which the younger shoots straight from the shoulder.

In the preliminaries, Kid Alexander meets Red Gaddis in an eight, Billy Lanham faces Leon Ford in a five-rounder, and Frank For meets Billy Unk and Kid Ferris tangles with Speedy Robinson in the opening fours.

Pep, Beau Jack Top Fight Cards

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—Willie Pep, one of the busiest champions of all time, moves on to Boston Monday for a nontitle clash with Joey Angelo, the Providence, R. I., lightweight who recently defeated Bob Montgomery. Pep, the featherweight king from Hartford, Conn., will oppose Angelo in an over-the-weight 10.

In Chicago's Stadium, Friday night, Beau Jack, the former lightweight titleholder on the comeback road, tangles with Johnny Bratton, crack Chicago fighter in a 10.

Connolly Voted Tops

MacMitchell's AAU Victory Launches Iron-Man Schedule

New York, Jan. 18 (AP).—For his record-tying performance in the 1000 last night, Fordham's Jerry Connolly today was voted the outstanding competitor in the Metropolitan AAU track and field championships.

But it was an old favorite, Leslie MacMitchell, the former champ miler, who captured the fans' fancy with a driving finish that brought him his first victory in a year over his favorite distance.

In fifth place and 20 yards off the pace going into the final quarter, MacMitchell carried the New York A. C.'s colors to victory by 3 yards over teammate Tommy Quinn. Larry Ellis, brilliant New York U. freshman, was third.

MacMitchell was clocked in 4:18.9 over the flat surface of the Twenty-third Regiment Armory track. It was excellent time for the course and indicated that the one-time NYU great was ready to go against Gil Dodds and Penn State's Gerry Karver, among others.

The 26-year-old MacMitchell will try an iron man stunt this week when the track season goes full blast.

Four meets are on tap with the Philadelphia Inquirer games Friday in Convention Hall, and the Boston K. of C. games, the West Point relays and the Long Island K. of C. games down for Saturday.

MacMitchell will run the mile in Philadelphia against Quinn, Bill Hulse of New York, Taver Perkins of the Illinois A. C., Karver, Villanova's Browning Ross and Jack Milne of North Carolina.

MacMitchell won the event in 4:17.2 last year and failed to win at the distance thereafter.

At Boston the former NYU flash will challenge Dodds, Hulse, Quinn and Perkins.

Connolly staged a thrilling upset in capturing the 1000. He handed Reggie Pearman of NYU his first defeat when he equaled Gene Venzke's seven-year-old record of 2:14.2. Venzke set up that time while wearing spikes which Connolly didn't use last night. The Fordham youngster had three yards on Pearman.

For that performance Connolly received a total of 55 points from the writers while MacMitchell tied for second at 33 with Bill Vessie, Columbia, who bettered the meet record by 5/8ths of an inch in winning the high jump at 6 feet

Baldwin, Ives Would Extend Rent Control

By The Associated Press

Two Republican Senators who "don't like rent controls"—Baldwin of Connecticut and Ives of New York—proposed yesterday that the controls be extended to June 30, 1949.

Ives

Further, they said a bill they will introduce will call for reclamping restrictions on the price of residential hotel accommodations.

In a statement stressing their dislike for controls, Baldwin and Ives added:

"In view of the fact that there has been no substantial alleviation of the severe housing shortage, particularly in metropolitan areas, and in view of the increased danger of inflation, it is necessary to prevent unbridled bidding for needed and limited living quarters."

The Ives-Baldwin measure, which is to be introduced today, runs counter to an Administration proposal to extend the controls until March 30, 1950. The Administration's recommendation was submitted to a Senate Banking subcommittee Saturday by Tighe E. Woods, Housing expediter.

Present controls are due to expire February 29, 1948. The subcommittee, headed by Senator Cain (R., Wash.), is now hearing testimony on legislation to extend the deadline.

Extension of rent controls was described by Secretary of Commerce Harriman Saturday as one of the "cardinal points" in President Truman's anti-inflation program. Republican leaders have signified their intention to ignore most of the program, but have expressed the view that rent controls should be extended in some form.

In addition to restoring controls on residential hotel accommodations, the Ives-Baldwin measure would roll back these rents to levels of June 30, 1947, except in the case of a lease. Transient hotel accommodations would not be affected.

Ives and Baldwin said that it was "most difficult" to extend the present bill with "complete fairness" because of the voluntary increases of up to 15 per cent entered into by "tens of thousands of tenants" under the present bill. The leases signed by tenants agreeing to such a rent increase run through December 31, 1948.

The proposed bill would extend the rent ceiling on such properties at the present level until June 30, 1949

To the UNITED STATES and the UNITED NATIONS...

Since the United Nations General Assembly voted for the partition of Palestine on November 29, 1947, a shameful and deeply disquieting situation has arisen to which public opinion cannot remain indifferent.

Openly defying the United Nations, the governments of the Arab States, themselves members of the UN, are deliberately encouraging aggression against the Jews of Palestine. They are using Syria, Lebanon, Egypt and Iraq as bases for these operations. They are providing funds, ammunition and military training, and have already launched attacks in force from Syria and Lebanon against Palestinian Jews. In Palestine itself this state of affairs has resulted in unbridled violence by armed Arab bands organized by Haj Amin el Husseini, the same Arab leader who during the war immeasurably aided Hitler in broadcasts from Berlin urging the Moslems of the Middle East to revolt against the Allies.

This campaign of violence has no moral justification. It is directed against a decision of the United Nations made after nearly twenty committees of inquiry had investigated the problem of Palestine over a period of more than twenty-five years. The decision of the United Nations was, moreover, a compromise which granted national states in Palestine to both Jews and Arabs.

The campaign of violence we now witness is not a spontaneous uprising by the majority of Palestine's Arabs. On the contrary, they wish to live in peace with their Jewish neighbors. But they are terrorized by the ex-Mufti's bands assisted by his confederates in Cairo, Baghdad, Beirut and Damascus. Significantly, Arab violence is largely directed against Jerusalem which, according to the UN decision, is to be an international territory because it is sacred to the Christian world.

The campaign of Arab aggression, led by a group of former Nazi allies and their accomplices across the frontiers, is therefore directed not only against the Jews, not only against the peaceful majority of Palestine's Arabs, but against the authority of the United Nations itself.

This is a bold attempt to blackmail the United Nations into submission. It is an attempt by violence to render impotent the first great decision of the United Nations. If this campaign succeeds, it will reduce the United Nations to a debating society. At a moment when world peace is the hope of all men of good will, it will smash the effectiveness of the only instrument for international peace we possess. It will disillusion those millions who had hopes that at last some way other than the holocaust of war could be found to settle international problems.

If the United Nations cannot make its Palestine decision stick, if a handful of willful men can prevent a UN decision from being carried out because they do not like that decision, then no future action of the UN will have more worth than the paper upon which it is written.

For this state of affairs not only the ex-Mufti and his cohorts are responsible. Other powers are not wholly free of responsibility. The British Government, which insisted that it retain control over Palestine and sole responsibility for law and order until the termination of the Palestine Mandate, seems either unwilling or unable to maintain law and order. We do not attempt to judge whether this policy is dictated by unwillingness or inability. But the fact remains that the security situation in Palestine is steadily deteriorating.

One thing is certain: while Arab bands attack Jewish settlements, blockade wide areas, and waylay traffic on the highways, British officials and forces have repeatedly interfered with Jewish defense and counterattack, repeatedly arrested and disarmed the defenders, and repeatedly confiscated their armaments.

The United Nations has not yet taken action against those overt acts of its Arab member-governments which constitute an open defiance of the Resolution of the General Assembly and of the Charter itself. Nor has the United Nations reacted as yet to the fact that the ex-Mufti's bands and the attitude of the British Administration are a clear challenge and threat to the authority of this international body.

Even if the only issue at stake were the safety of the 700,000 Jews of Palestine, American public opinion should have been deeply concerned. Our Government was largely instrumental in bringing about the United Nations decision on partition. What had we in mind when we encouraged the aspirations of the Jewish people to nationhood in Palestine? Was it our intention to leave them there defenseless?

Much more is at stake than our moral responsibility toward the Jews. We repeat, the very future of the United Nations is in jeopardy. This open defiance of the United Nations decision comes from a group of Middle Eastern states which depend upon the UN and the Western world for sovereignty and international recognition, for political and military protection as well as economic development. If we permit such conduct on the part of the Arab States, then the authority of the United Nations will suffer a staggering blow which can result in incalculable harm to men everywhere.

Let us make no mistake about the danger involved in this situation. The conflict may assume world-wide dimensions, or, alternatively, this aggression of the Arab States can be restrained, thus making the Palestine solution a potent factor for peace and stability in the world. America must help to determine whether the effectiveness of the United Nations shall be destroyed or strengthened.

The United States wants peace in the world. It is to its vital interests to uphold the Palestine decision of the United Nations. Our Government should, therefore, actively support the following measures:

1. A stern warning to the Arab States calling for an end to the sabotage of the UN decision.
2. An unmistakably clear declaration to Great Britain that as long as she remains in Palestine, her armed forces can be neither neutral nor quasi-neutral, but must act in defense of public law and the UN decision.
3. Immediate use of the proper UN agencies to provide international military protection for Palestine Jewry and make immediately available the necessary military force to implement the United Nations decision on Palestine.
4. Immediate equipment of the Haganah under United Nations auspices to enable this Jewish constabulary defense force to carry out police powers within Jewish territory in Palestine.

Only in this manner can the United States and the United Nations prevent the threatened conflagration. The delay in implementing the UN decision has encouraged the Arab League and the ex-Mufti in their defiance of the U N and have forced the Jewish people to resort to desperate means to provide themselves with arms for their defense and for the maintenance of the U N decision.

RFC Layoffs Will Continue For 18 Months

RFC: Gradual lay-offs at Reconstruction Finance Corporation will continue for another 18 months. About 1400 employes will be laid off in that period.

RFC's budget will require it to get down from 6300 to about 5700 employes by June 30. And by June 30, 1949, the agency must shake down to 4893 employes. The big lending agency had 12,229 employes less than 18 months ago.

The terms of the five RFC board members will all expire this week.

STORY: James Bennett is the director of Federal Prisons. He recently visited the Atlanta Penitentiary. In making an inspection tour, he noticed an old man who had been in and out of prison for years. He went up to him and said:

"Why, Bill, are you in here again"?

"Yes," the indifferent old man began, "and I must say that it isn't so bad here—why, there isn't another place in the world where an old lug like me can associate with so many bankers and brokers."

PAY FACTS: Opposition to a general pay raise bill for Federal workers centers around the argument that it would be too costly to give each of the two million employes a pay raise. Well, the fact is this—that not nearly that number would benefit in a general pay raise bill. These are actual figures:

There are 460,000 postal workers, and about 835,000 per annum employes whose salaries are fixed by the Classification Act, or roughly 1,300,000 people whose salaries are fixed by Congress. In addition, there are about 95,000 others in RFC, TVA, Federal Housing and other agencies whose salaries are fixed by administrative action, and these agencies, in most instances, follow the Classification Act.

In addition there are 631,000 Federal workers whose salaries are fixed by wage boards without prior approval of Congress. The great body of these people have been given pay raises since July 1, 1946, the date of the last increase for postal and classified workers.

TAX TIP: This is the time many people are filing tax returns and Federal officials and employes who were ordered to travel last year on official business should consider this tip:

A Federal official told me that the Internal Revenue Bureau had approved his charging off to "job expense" $3 for each day he had traveled on official business. The bureau, it seems, is one Federal agency that realizes it's impossible for a Federal worker to pay all of his expenses on the $6 daily Government allowance. A $9 daily allowance is much more realistic.

NOTES: The Congress may soon hire a personnel director to "advise" members of Congress on the selection of employes for their offices and to staff committees. The plan definitely is in the works . . . An efficiency study of Treasury's CUSTOMS BUREAU has been completed by a New York management firm. Copies of it this week will go to the House Appropriations Committee and the Senate Expenditures Committee.

THE HOUSE Appropriations Committee has decided to report out its big annual independent offices appropriation bill in two parts. Part one will be out in two weeks. It will include the budgets of a score of independent agencies. Part two will be delayed for several months. In it will be the budgets of Veterans, Atomic Energy and Maritime. These three agencies are to have their proposed budgets investigated thoroughly in the meantime.

INTERIOR: Secretary Krug has promised not to change the working hours of his employes for at least six months, if at all . . . The budget carries funds for the air-conditioning of the SUPREME COURT library . . . RFC has set up a reserve fund of $1,120,000 to pay the terminal leave of employes who leave the agency. In other words, it won't have to pay leave costs out of operating expenses.

FBI will put its employes back on a 5-day, 40-hour work week on or before July 1. Its employes now work a minimum 6-day, 48-hour week and they are paid overtime for the sixth day. The work-week cutback was recommended in the President's budget.

LAW-BREAKERS: The Senate Committee on Executive Expenditures is making a study of the operation of the Congressional Reorganization Act. A report will point out that Congress last year violated 18 times the provision which prohibits legislative riders to appropriations and other bills.

Rossee, police said, drove across the center line and collided with an automobile driven by Wendell S. Kenyon, 23, of 3914 Bruce st., Alexandria.

Rossee, who was alone in his car, was unconscious in Arlington County General Hospital last night. He was reported to have suffered a fractured skull, broken leg and broken pelvis.

They collided with a truck operated by Lennie N. Woolridge, 42, of 753 W. Baltimore st., Baltimore, who, according to Montgomery County Police, swerved into the opposite traffic lane. Woolridge was charged with reckless driving. A hearing is scheduled for January 27 in Silver Spring Police Court, police said.

Phone Union Not to Bargain Nationally

Beirne Announces Stand on Eve of Conference Here

The Communications Workers of America (Ind.) do not plan to seek Nation-wide bargaining with the Bell telephone system this year.

This was revealed yesterday by CWA President Joseph A. Beirne on the eve of a union conference here to develop a collective bargaining program for 1948. The meeting, to be attended by 50 key negotiators, will convene at 10 a. m. today in Hotel Annapolis

Beirne said in a statement that "We are not even suggesting" national bargaining because the Bell system wanted "no part" of it last year. He said divisions affiliated with CWA would do their own bargaining locally and "we will give them advice and assistance."

The telephone union chief said wage demands have not been "decided" yet.

The negotiators will consider the Taft-Hartley law's effect on bargaining plans, Beirne said. He announced that Cyrus S. Ching, director of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service, will address the group at 10:30 a. m. tomorrow.

The union claims to represent 233,000 telephone workers.

'Chickie Pox' Afflicts 3 Quads; Saboteur Is 'Bad Boy Brother

The 3-year-old Cirminello quadruplets are having their first real tussle with the ills that flesh is heir to.

The three girls, children of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Cirminello of 1653 Colonial ter., Arlington, Va., are covered with welts.

Maureen, Kathleen and Eileen—who broke out with the spots in that order—know what hit them, too. They call it "chickie pox."

And they know the saboteur who passed the "chickie pox" germ on to them. It is Michael, their brother, and No. 4 of the quartet. The girls now righteously call him "Michael bad boy" because they learned from their mother that they got the bumps from him.

Michael didn't even know he had the chicken pox, and nobody else did, either, Mrs. Cirminello explained yesterday. She thinks he must have caught it in Philadelphia on Christmas Eve, when the quads, who have moved here since, visited the big city for the first time.

Their father moved back to Washington with the Securities and Exchange Commission right after New Year's, and has been settling his family in the Arlington home where he and Mrs. Cirminello lived before the SEC moved to Philadelphia at the start of the war.

Michael did have a few blotches before the family returned to Washington, but the diagnosis was hives.

Last week the girl quads developed symptoms indicating chicken pox.

All three had fever, so they had to stay indoors. They're feeling a lot better now, thank you, but their mother is carefully following the advice of the doctor and a Red Cross nursing book on how to keep the bumps from becoming scars.

The advice: cover the bumps with carbolated vaseline and cut the youngsters' fingernails short.

"It's the only time I've been glad Kathleen bites her nails," said Mrs. Cirminello as she tended the several sets of fingernails that did need ministration.

GSI Strike Enters Third Week Today

The strike of some 1200 union workers of 42 cafeterias of Government Services, Inc., drags into its third week today.

Only hope for settlement turned up in weekend rumors that Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach has been reviewing the dispute. Both sides, meanwhile, stood firm in positions that precipitated the walkout January 5.

Local 471, United Cafeteria and Restaurant Workers (UPW-CIO), insisted it would maintain picket lines at the 40 operating cafeterias until GSI consents to negotiate a 15-cent hourly increase demand and other terms of a new contract. The old one ran out at midnight, December 31.

GSI, claiming that new employes have kept service near normal, refused to budge from the view that it ought not bargain with a union that has failed to file non-Communist affidavits. In fact, it has told its employes "there is no union" and says the 1000 new workers taken on to replace the strikers are permanent employes.

Schwellenbach's role in the strike—GSI's second in as many years—was cloaked in secrecy. It is known, however, that he has conferred with Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming, who is the Government's representative in contracts with GSI for operation of the eating places.

Pickets marched yesterday at the only two cafeterias that operate Sundays—National Gallery of Art and Arlington Farms. Today, resumption of picketing was promised at all other cafeterias except those at the Labor Department and Supreme Court, which have been closed at the request of the agencies involved.

Richard A. Bancroft, union president, said he expected a drop today in the number of GSI's "strikebreakers." He said many had indicated they were simply waiting last week for their pay on Friday, and would not return to work today, "now that they have learned the real issues."

Coal Fumes Fatal To Arlingtonian; 5 Saved by Doctor

Victim Had Gone Downstairs to Take Care of Furnace, Authorities State

An Arlington County man died yesterday after being overcome by carbon monoxide fumes from a coal furnace he was tending in the basement of his home.

In another coal gas case yesterday, a family doctor saved a family of five from possible asphyxiation at 6627 Piney Branch rd. nw.

Dr. W. C. Wilburn, Arlington County Coroner, said John Simon, 2404 16th st. N., Arlington, a certified public accountant, was dead of carbon monoxide fumes upon arrival at Arlington County Hospital about 4 p. m.

His wife, Mrs. Jennie Carter Simon, 59, also overcome by the fumes, was reported in "fair" condition at the hospital.

The coroner said Simon had placed sifted ashes and small coal in the furnace, producing fumes which escaped into the basement.

A neighbor, Mrs. Charles G. Kozel, 2405 Wilson blvd., said the Simons had lived at the 16th st. address for about 25 years, up to two years ago, when they moved into the Burlington hotel so Mr. Simon could be near his office.

The house was not occupied at the present time, Mrs. Kozel said, and the Simons were attempting to keep the fire going so water pipes would not freeze. Mrs. Simon was partially overcome by fumes from the furnace a month ago, Mrs. Kozel said.

Mrs. Simon visited the Kozels while her husband tended the furnace yesterday afternoon and about 4 p. m. went to see about her husband. Mrs. Kozel said her husband, who went to the house with Mrs. Simon, found the two collapsed in the basement.

In the other gas case, Dr. J. Raymond Raedy, 4921 New Hampshire ave. nw., had been summoned about noon by Mr. and Mrs. Arthur W. Trout when their daughter, Joan, 4, became ill.

As Dr. Raedy was treating Joan for what appeared to be an unexplainable fit of vomiting, both Trout and his wife, Grace, collapsed.

On the suspicion that some odorless gas must be present, Dr. Raedy flung open the windows and summoned Fire Rescue Squad No. 2. The firemen revived the Trouts by administering oxygen.

Two infants, Margaret, 17 months, and Mary, 3 months, were unaffected.

In the basement, firemen found that an elbow pipe leading from the furnace to the chimney had been torn off by the force of the blower fan, permitting coal gas fumes to fill the basement and seep upward into the first-floor rooms.

Strictly Secret

X-Ray Data Are Held in Confidence

The strictly confidential aspects of the Washington Chest X-ray survey were emphasized here last night by survey sponsors.

The campaign to X-ray the chests of upward of 600,000 Washington residents and workers for signs of tuberculosis enters its second week today, with an estimated 30,000 X-rays made last week.

At Weightman School, 23d and M sts. nw., the first films are being studied by U. S. Public Health Service physicians.

No one but the physicians in charge of the laboratory work and the film reading know the result of any chest check, campaign sponsors pointed out last night.

Two messenger, truck drivers, who deliver essential supplies to X-ray units in 14 locations in the city, bring back complete data of the previous day's operations to Weightman School. The films are immediately developed, and made ready for interpretation by the staff physicians, Drs. Edward Elisberg and George and Muriel Graham.

Those whose reports are negative, receive the result at home by postcard. Those whose film indicates need of further examination are advised by sealed letter.

The "suspects" are given a definite appointment for a follow-up chest check, then advised individually and privately of desirable procedure to follow.

Sponsors are the District Department of Health, the D. C. Tuberculosis Association, and USPHS. X-rays are free to all adults 15 years and older. Costs have already been paid in taxes and in purchases of Christmas Seals from the Tuberculosis Association.

Developments two days before Tuesday's trek to the polls centered about Lafayette, La., where Representative James Domengeaux (D., La.) repeated charges he made Thursday in the House of Representatives against gubernatorial candidate Earl K. Long, brother of the late United States Senator Huey P. Long.

On the floor of Congress, speaking with congressional immunity, Domengeaux made charges against Long which were followed by a one-million-dollar "conspiracy" suit filed by Long against Domengeaux and others.

Today's address by Domengeaux was broadcast over a regional network in response to a request by Long that the congressman shed his immunity to reiterate the charges be made in Congress.

Installation Held

New Pastor For French Worshipers

Dr. Florian Vurpillot, pastor-emeritus of the congregation, conducted the installation at St. John's Episcopal Church, 16th and H sts. nw., where the group meets Sunday afternoons.

Pastor Toureille preached in France until the war began, then became army chaplain. On the fall of France, he became general chaplain of alien refugees and internees in France and her colonies.

His activities in the resistance movement caused his frequent arrest and interrogation by the Gestapo. He and his wife have five children. The family expects to come here in July. It was inadvertently stated in Friday's Washington Post that Pastor Touirelle is single. The Washington Post regrets the error.

Meat Institute Hits Predictions Of Shortages

Chicago, Jan. 18 (AP).—Predictions that meat will be in such short supply by spring as to necessitate rationing and price controls were described as "unjustified" today by the American Meat Institute.

The Institute said in a press statement, "analyhis of estimates shows that while meat supplies will be low during the late spring and summer, the quantity available over the year ahead actually will amount to about one half ounce less per person per day than during 1907.

"If the decrease is spread over three meals a day, or even two, the reduced size of portions would be so small as to make no impression on the eye. Actually, the quantity will be almost one fourth of an ounce more per person per day than during prewar years."

Drunken Driving Danger Peak Seen At 9 to 10 P. M.

The average drunken driver in the District is 34 years of age, and injures innocent persons usually between 9 and 10 p. m., mainly on Saturdays.

These are the findings of the District Department of Vehicles and Traffic and the Commissioners' Traffic Advisory Board from last year's accident statistics. This month officials are waging a campaign to eliminate drunken drivers.

Statistics indicate that accidents involving intoxicated drivers most often occur when the streets otherwise are safe—the weather clear and road surface dry.

Drivers involved in accidents while under the influence of intoxicating liquors are most often white men with five or more years of driving experience, and property damage inflicted ranges from $100 to $250.

Mission to Holy Land

Raul Diez de Medina Going to Palestine

By Marie McNair

IF YOU haven't seen Dr. Raul Diez de Medina about town these days, you can look for him at Lake Success.

The Minister-Counselor of the Bolivian Embassy comes to Washington only on week ends. Other times he's studying the problems of Palestine, for as a member of the U. N. Palestine Commission, he has heavy responsibilities on his hands.

Some time in the next month or so, Dr. Medina—one of the "five lonely pilgrims"—will set off for the Holy Land with other members of the commission, charged with the duty to enforce the U. N. partition plan in Palestine.

Dangerous Assignment

Arab leaders have said some of the expedition may lose their lives. It's a dangerous assignment, yet one that Dr. Medina looks forward to with deep interest.

Headed by Karel Lisicky of Czechoslovakia, nearly 30 years in the foreign service, all five members of the group have at one time in their lives been exiles from their native lands.

Raul Diez de Medina first came to this country almost 20 years ago when his father was appointed Bolivian Minister to Washington. He studied at Georgetown University, joined the Bolivian Legation as Second Secretary but soon resigned to write articles on inter-American affairs for American Newspapers.

Under the name Gaston Nerval he was a frequent contributor to local journals as well as to periodicals in South America. During those five years as a writer he wrote and published a book, "Autopsy of the Monroe Doctrine," which was praised by critics throughout the world and is now widely used as a textbook.

Fought Dictator

Returning to diplomacy Raul de Medina, rejoined the legation here as Second Secretary and was promoted to Counselor, but he resigned when the late Col. Gualberto Villarroel seized power in La Paz. From 1943 he devoted the following 30 months to fighting Bolivia's dictator, using his typewriter and American contacts as his weapons.

It was almost two years ago that Villarroel fell and Dr. Medina was named Charge d'Affaires of Bolivia and later Minister-Counselor, the post he now holds.

A bachelor, Raul Diez de Medina, is the youngest of the quintet of pilgrims about to set off on this important mission.

He's a great student, collects Lincolniana as a hobby, and dances a divine tango. In addition he's something of a lecturer, has addressed groups all over the United States, in Panama, Cuba and Puerto Rico.

LEAVING behind Washington's January "freeze" and heading into the land of sunshine and flowers will be Dr. and Mrs. William A. Morgan who're taking off by air today for Puerto Rico. Prepared to enjoy a month's vacation, the Morgans will be at least a week in Port au Prince and its environs and will visit Haiti and the Dominican Republic.

While it's a pleasure jaunt, Dr. Morgan won't get through Trujillo City without a visit to the big modernistic William A. Morgan Hospital. The institution was named for him in grateful appreciation of the hundreds of tonsil operations the doctor performed on suffering natives.

After Three Years' Recess From Doctoring, Girl, 17, Who Hasn't Walked in 13 Years, Dreads Fresh Experiment, Which Parents Urge

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am turning to you for the help I so desperately need. I am a girl 17 and I haven't walked since the age of 4; and now my parents are urging me to see a new doctor at a certain hospital, who is—they tell me—doing research in my illness.

At first I refused, but they have asked me to reconsider. I do want to walk; but I don't think I can go through treatments all over again. I had one doctor for seven years and I had great faith in him. He told me definitely that he would help me; but after two operations my mother saw I was growing worse, not better.

When she asked him to tell her the truth, he said he couldn't be sure and shortly afterward he withdrew from the case. I was 13 at the time and mother decided to give me a vaaction from doctoring. Since then I have known what life can be without doctors, hospitals, etc.

She Is Haunted By Awful Dream

IF I RESUME treatment it will mean more years in the hospital, with possible defeat in the end. And since my last operation I have been haunted by a horrible dream, in which I am flat on my back, strapped to a table, suffocating, gasping for air and a voice seems to be saying, "Administer the anesthetic."

I had been so nervous that my doctor advised against telling me of the impending operation. I'll never forget the fear in my heart as they pinned me down and clamped the mask on my face. I've never told anyone about this ridiculous dream as I know they would laugh at me, but when I wake I am soaked with perspiration and shaking all over.

Th very thought of entering an operating room, of being flat on the table under that glaring light and horrible mask makes me almost hysterical. I tell myself that this and the dream are childish fears; but though I am rational and intelligent in other respects, they seem too deeply rooted to be laughed off.

I have thought of appealing to my parents about my feelings, but how could they understand? I would like to speak to a psychiatrist, but my parents would never agree to it. Please help me. I'll be waiting. Sometimes I think I am not afraid to die as much as I am to live. C. D.

Girl's Hunch Merits Respect

DEAR C. D.: The most help I can give from this distance—and it is a suggestion derived from a specialist—is to strongly urge your parents to respect your hunch that psychological tensions may be at the root of the illness.

One seemingly incidental aspect of your story illustrates a potential of emotional conflict of figuratively paralyzing proportions, to-wit: You want intensely to speak to a psychiatrist; which is to say, unburden your hidden fears to a sage attentive listener capable of understanding their significance and throwing light into darkness.

Yet you also feel with equal intensity that your parents never would agree to it, just as you feel they would laugh at your recurrent horrible dream if you were to unfold it to them, which hints at a possibility—certainly deserving of close inquiry—that from your unconscious view, something in the parental attitude automatically freezes your spontaneity.

Ego in Conflict With Authority

NOW, about the dream which you construe simply as a nightmare recollection of a concrete terrifying incident: In semblance, dreams are linked with actual experience often. But usually, one might say almost invariably, anxiety-dreams thus dramatized are essentially concerned to discharge (in deceptive every-day terms) unbearably painful, unconscious emotional material — i. e., the fears, frustrations, rages, despairs, etc., suffered by the ego in combat with restrictive environment and coercive authority.

Thus the symbolism of your dream may refer to unconscious feelings of frantic but strapped (or helpless) reaction to ego-smothering administered by authority doing violence to your personality, allegedly for your own good. And indeed your ailing condition may have originally issued from that. It may be an hysterical form of paralysis, a seizure that would baffle the average physician.

In any event, my advice, addressed to your parents, is (1) to respect your hunch that soul sickness and psychiatric help are indicated here; and (2) to give you the benefit — prior to further treatment—of the very finest, most comprehensive diagnostic procedure, which fortunately is to be found in the famous "general hospital" in your city. M. H.

Your Question On Homemaking

Can you give me a recipe which appeared in The Sunday Post sometime ago? It was for mocha cake and consisted of a chocolate cake over which was poured (before baking) a mixture of cocoa, brown sugar, and black coffee. B. M.

The recipe for Mystery Mocha Cake is as follows:

1 cup sifted flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
⅛ teaspoon salt
1 square (1 oz.) unsweetened chocolate
2 tablespoons butter
½ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla
½ cup brown sugar
½ cup sugar
4 tablespoons cocoa
1 cup cold double-strength coffee

Mix and sift first four ingredients. Melt chocolate and butter together over hot water. Add to first mixture. Blend well. Combine milk and vanilla; add and mix well. Pour into greased pan. Combine brown sugar ½ cup white sugar, and cocoa. Sprinkle over batter. Pour coffee over top. Bake in moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 40 minutes. Serve warm or cold.

I have a dozen handcrafted aluminum highball glasses which at present are shiny and bright. I am told by a friend that these will become dull and lose their sheen as they become older. Is there any way I can prevent this from happening? N. I. D.

Proper care will do much toward keeping these aluminum articles shining. Remember that strong soaps, alkalis, or alkaline scouring powders all darken aluminum. Always use mild soap in washing them and buff clean with dry cloth. Water that is naturally alkaline can leave a dark film on the surface, too, so it's a good idea not to let the "glasses" soak but wash them quickly. If an alkaline deposit forms inside, it can be removed with fine steel wool pads impregnated with a special soap designed for use on aluminum.

Can you advise me on how to remove a mustard stain from a table cloth? The cloth is not white, but is ecru—a very fine linen with point Venice lace throughout. The mustard stain is partly on the lace, too. The cloth has been washed since it was stained. A. J.

The stain may have been set by laundering. However, try sponging the spot with alcohol. Or work glycerine into the stain, rub lightly between the hands, then wash in soap and water.

I wish to refinish an antique spool-turned gate leg cherry table. The table has only a varnish finish with a few water marks. Otherwise, it's in good condition. Please tell me the best method to remove the varnish down to the natural wood without darkening or raising the grain. The table will be used for a dining table. I wish to use an oil and wax finish. Will the oil finish described in your column on January 5 be the correct finish? V. J. B.

To take the old finish off the table, use a good grade of paint and varnish remover. Other supplies you'll need for the job include: brush, putty knife, piece of burlap, fine grade sandpaper, soft lintless rags, and rubber gloves.

Wearing gloves to protect your hands, apply paint and varnish remover with brush. Let stand until old finish is softened enough to lift off with putty knife. Several applications may be necessary. Apply remover to small area at a time. Remove finish from that then continue to another area. On carved or turned parts such as the spool legs, wipe off softened finish with burlap. Use fine grade sandpaper to get off stubborn spots. If you use a liquid remover made of benzene or acetone, neutralize by going over the piece with denatured alcohol as soon as finish is removed. If you use an alkali remover, wash with a cloth wrung out in clear water. After the piece is thoroughly dry, sand it satin smooth with fine sandpaper.

The oil and wax finish you ask about is lovely on old pieces and should be satisfactory on a table receiving ordinary dining room usage.

I have a white table cloth, with a pink border, which has been stained. The first time I put it on the table, I did some ironing of handkerchiefs on top of the cloth. The heat of the iron evidently drew the paint of the maple veneer table top with the result that the cloth is stained. Can you tell me how to remove the stain prior to varnishing? W. P. M.

Once a paint or varnish stain has hardened, it is almost impossible to remove. Try benzene first. Alcohol also might be effective. A mixture of equal parts benzene, carbon tetrachloride, and amyl acetate (banana oil) would be an even stronger solution to use but would, of course, be more troublesome to make up. After applying this solution, rub in a dry-cleaning soap to help loosen the stain. Finally rinse out with carbon tetrachloride.

Of what value is meat from which stock has been made? Should it be discarded or can it be used in some form? H. K.

Although a good deal of the flavor and nutritive value is cooked out of meat in making stock, there's usually quite a bit of both left in it. It can be used in a variety of ways—cut up in the soup, in making stews, hash or creamed dishes, in stuffing pepper and other vegetables, or in making meat salad. The way it's used, of course, depends on the kind, quality and amount of the meat. Some of the stock can be used with it in mixed dishes to give extra flavor.

Will you tell me how to make crisp French toast? Do you cook it over a high or low fire? Mine always turns out soggy. R. L.

French toast should be cooked either on a hot, well-greased griddle or fried in hot, deep fat. Cook until good and brown on one side, then turn on the other and brown. You may find that stale bread makes French toast you like better than that made with very fresh bread.

You've helped me and turnabout is fair play! One of your correspondents asked the other day how to prevent cigarette burns on a table. Assuming her family and guests will use ash trays if provided, counsel her to use the bowl-like, thin-edged type which it is impossible for a lighted and neglected cigarette to topple off of and burn the table. R. L. M.

I have some old stamps postmarked from all the old countries over the world, before World War I. Could you tell me if these have any value? M. E. M.

It's difficult to say whether these stamps are of value without a more complete description. William M. Stuart, who writes the "Washington Philatelist" column in The Washington Post each Sunday, says that if you will bring or send your stamps in, he will be glad to examine them and give you his opinion of their value. It would be well to drop him a line and make an appointment if you plan to bring in the stamps so that he will be sure to be at The Washington Post when you come.

On an old secretary which we recently purchased, a bit of the veneer has been chipped off. What can we do to correct this? B. L.

The filling of holes in furniture was discussed at length in this column on Monday, January 12. This sort of repair work should be done after the old finish has been removed and before it is sanded or stained.

PETUNIA!

I can't see the salt
And I can't read the papers
. . . But My, it's romantic,
This dining with tapers!

It would be even more romantic, Petunia, if your candle didn't drip all over the place! Either give your candles a coat of shellac, or keep them in the ice-box 24 hours before using. There'll be no more drips on the linen.

Mother's Voice Tells Story Of Irritation

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

Few of us are conscious of our voices and still fewer recognize our own when we hear it. The most astounding of experiences is for any person to hear himself talk by way of a radio transcript. He is certain that that couldn't possibly be he.

It might be equally illuminating if mothers knew what their voices sounded like to their children. The soft voice, the voice with an amused and affectionate smile in it, is apt to be reserved for the children of other people. One's own get a very stern voice, or a prim one with a no-nonsense tone. Parents are so afraid if they talk softly and sweetly that their children will ride roughshod over them. They have the fear of being too-nice.

Mothers are guilty of letting their emotions about their daily experiences creep into their voices. They have an argument with the meat man who has sent a tough piect of meat; with Daddy who wants to know what happened to all the money he had given them; with their best friend over some other best friend. The children get a full dose of these emotions when mothers talk to them. There is an I-can't-stand-any-more-of-this vibration that warns the child to go easy, or something will pop.

A child senses the feeling a parent has about personal shortcomings. The mother says irritatedly, "Oh, that dress! You look simply terrible in it. Here, let me pull down that belt. Can't you try to keep yourself more tidy?"

The child knows. It isn't the dress, it is she who is too fat or too thin, and doesn't please her mother. It is all in her voice, her disappointment, her aggravation.

Mothers can learn a lot about their voices if they will listen to their children at play. The way in which a child bosses the younger children when she is mama; the tone of the conversation at the table, this is all skillfully and often embarrassingly portrayed in play.

It's well for mothers to treat her children to her company voice more often. A child who listens to his mother talk sweetly and graciously to him will imitate this same voice. Then a parent is delighted to have people say, "What a lovely personality your child has, so charming and pleasant." It's all in what children are used to hearing and even if a parent thinks she has the privilege of talking harshly, flatly or irritatedly; she doesn't want her children to advertise this to the public.

Hope for Ban On Race Bars To Jobs Seen

Hopes for legislation this year to eliminate racial discrimination in employment were expressed here yesterday by John W. Gibson, Assistant Secretary of Labor.

"Progress which has been made in recent years and months has been astounding," Gibson told more than 450 members of the District Chapter of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

The meeting in the John Wesley Methodist Church marked the beginning of the chapter's four-week drive for $30,000 and more than double its membership—from 8000 to 20,000 members.

Gibson said that President Truman's request to Congress for one million dollars for a commission to eliminate discrimination in employment was "another great step" forward.

Charles H. Houston, Washington attorney, said that Negroes should have but one fear during 1948—that they might win their rights so rapidly that they may not be prepared to face the increased responsibilities.

Highlighting the drive will be a recital by Todd Duncan, singer, at 8 p. m. February 4 at the Metropolitan Methodist Church, according to Mrs. Thomasina W. Johnson, chairman of the membership drive.

Martinsburg Field Seen Ignored in Air Emergencies

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 18.—Landing facilities of the municipal airport here are not being utilized in emergencies by Washington-bound planes, E. C. Parkinson, manager of the field, said here today.

Garland L. Dunn, chairman of the Chamber of Commerce aviation committee, disclosed he has written Congressman Melvin C. Snyder of this district to inquire into the situation. Dunn said the Eastern Airlines plane which crashed near Washington last Monday might have landed safely here.

The field, he said, is on the direct Washington to Pittsburgh route and can be properly lighted at night. It is within 20 minutes' flying time from both Washington and Baltimore.

National Forest Timber Sales Net Va. $16,802

Harrisburg, Va., Jan. 18.—The sale of timber and other products of the George Washington National Forest during the last fiscal year will net the State of Virginia $16,802.54, Forest Supervisor Hemingway reports.

This amount, representing one quarter of total receipts, is $1412.44 more than was distributed from this source the previous year. It will be prorated among 12 counties according to the acreage of National Forest land in each county.

The forest supervisor said timber access roads built in the forest resulted in a record amount of timber sold in the fiscal year ending June 30, 1947.

Suspect Held In Theater Fire

Hagerstown, Md., Jan. 18 (AP).—Police said they are questioning a 24-year-old man about a fire which did between $75,000 and $100,000 damage at the Colonial Theater last night.

About 100 persons in the audience were ushered to safety by Patrolman Leon Allen, who was off duty, before the flames made much headway. One fireman was overcome by smoke and another was cut on the head by falling plaster while fighting the blaze.

Detective Sergt. Wayne A. Sellman would make no comment on questioning of the man at the jail except to say that arson has not been ruled out as the cause of the fire.

New Ship Subsidy Is Greeted With Mixed Feelings

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—There are mixed feeling in shipping circles here over the Maritime Commission's approval of an operating subsidy contract to the South Atlantic Steamship Company, which will give Hampton Roads a direct cargo service to European ports.

"A direct service is the desire of every port," one maritime official said in a typical comment. "But the question is whether or not the service will prove profitable for the company."

He compared the service to that operated a number of years ago by the Baltimore Mail Line, pointing out that "it was beneficial to the port but not to the operators" and they finally had to give it up.

The Maritime Commission granted South Atlantic the subsidy contract after the company declared it was necessary to make operations economically possible.

Communists Hit Byrd As Against All Labor

Richmond, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—The Communists Party of Virginia announced today the distribution of several thousand leaflets entitled "it's you the Byrd machine is after when they say outlaw the Communist Party."

The leaflet charges that the Moncure-Locher bill to outlaw the Communist Party, introduced in the Virginia House of Delegates last week, "pretends" to be aimed at the "numerically small Communist Party," but is "really after the CIO Political Action Committee, the AFL Labor League, the railway unions political action organization, the Negro people and all Virginians who dare challenge the Byrd autocratic rule by a few."

Dump Truck Fall Kills Md. Worker

Lawyer Still Plugs a Point, Just for Fun, After 25 Years

Roscoe F. Walter, 67, retired Rockville, Md., attorney, has been needling the courts on a point of law for 25 years, but he admits he does it "for the fun of it."

Walter's most recent appearance was at the Maryland Public Service Commission hearing on abandonment of the Branchville-Beltsville trolley line.

He claimed the Interstate Commerce Commission was the proper body to consider the issue, but the PSC didn't agree with him.

The case was one of a long history of cases in which he had appeared to argue the jurisdiction of the State versus the Federal Government.

Phone Cases Specialty

Telephone rate cases are his specialty, since he claims that phones are instruments that are used for either interstate or intrastate commerce. Therefore, he declares, rates should be set by the Federal Communications Commission.

His first telephone case came up in his native West Virginia in 1925. The court, as courts have done ever since, over ruled him.

When the court ignored his arguments in a case last year in Baltimore, he carried it to the Federal District Court. As defendants in his action he named the Governor, the Attorneys General of the United States and the State, the FCC, and a number of others.

The court's decision gave Walter a verbal trouncing for naming so many defendants, and noted that the only reason for it was "the blessed American privilege of suing anybody he wanted to." Walter is convinced, though, that they were interested parties, and he says he still intends to prove it.

Denied Hearing

He filed for a rehearing, but says he wasn't notified of the court's decision in time to carry the case further.

The telephone issue loomed up again when the Chesapeake & Potomac asked for a rate hike in Washington last year. Walter asked to present his case on ground that he was a Federal taxpayer, but he didn't get a hearing.

The retired attorney is still determined to get the issue of jurisdiction before the Supreme Court. His current program calls for interesting members of Congress in his experiences and getting action through Interstate Commerce Committees or the Judiciary Committee.

Md. Manual Maps 12,000 Geographic Feautures

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (AP).—Twelve thousand geographic features in Maryland are listed in a new, pocket-sized booklet now being distributed by the State Planning Commission.

Listed in the new manual are towns, rivers, streams, coves, schools, mountains, airports, roads. Government installations and even sewage disposal plants.

The booklet costs 50 cents. Copies are available at the State Planning Commission.

Blacksburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Miss Maude E. Wallace, assistant director of the Virginia Agricultural Extension Service, and Miss Janet Cameron, nutritionist, will address the Home Economics Section of the Southern Agricultural Workers Conference at Washington February 11-14. Textile Factory Gets Charter in Jefferson Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—A charter of incorporation has been granted by the Secretary of State to Barel Mills, Inc., textile manufacturing firm of Middleway, Jefferson County, with incorporators listed as W. E. V. Terhune, New York City; Lacy I. Rice, Martinsburg, and L. J. Sjostrom, Winchester, Va.

Rice said the firm is a subsidiary of the Virginia Woolen Co. of Winchester.

Fredericksburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Over 1300 colleges and educational institutions have been invited to send representatives to the third annual Grand National Forensic Tournament to be held at Mary Washington College, March 25-27.

Students will compete in address reading, debate, declamation, original oration and poetry reading.

Bridge Fall Fatal

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (AP).—The body of a man, about 35, was found under the Orleans street viaduct here early today, and police said he apparently had fallen 35 feet from the span to his death.

Patrolman Theodore Baccala said a label in the man's black and white sport jacket bore the name "Paul Childs," and Cumberland, Md., as an address.

Road, Bridge Building Could Be Quadrupled

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (AP).—Seventy-six general contractors have indicated to the State Roads Commission they can undertake four times more road and bridge work in Maryland than is planned.

Also, 15 suppliers said they can produce amounts of crushed stone, sand and gravel far in excess of the commission's needs.

The views were responses to questionnaires sent out by the commission.

The only item reported short of the State's requirements was portland cement. Local agencies said they can furnish 150,000 barrels. The State will require 500,000 barrels.

Tuck to Send Va. Budget To Assembly

Richmond, Va., Jan. 18.—Governor Tuck will transmit to the General Assembly at noon tomorrow his budget recommending the spending of about half a billion dollars.

The legislators tonight were speculating on how the Governor intended to correlate his budget with his words of last Wednesday opposing the sales tax.

The budget is for the two years beginning July 1, 1948. It was expected to exceed the 1946-1948 budget by more than 150 millions.

While they awaited the budget message, legislators discussed the drive by Senator Charles R. Fenwick of Arlington for State participation in rural area health projects under the Hill-Burton Act.

Fenwick wa s the State to put up two millions to be used in the program under which the Federal Government, the State and the locality each pays one third of the cost of such hospital-health center plans.

Legislative developments tomorrow are expected to include announcement of Senate and House standing committees memberships.

The highlight of the legislative week will come about 1 p. m. Wednesday, when Governor Tuck appears before a joint session of the two branches to deliver his message on reorganization of the State government. Details were worked out by a study commission headed by former United States Senator Thomas G. Burch of Martinsville, aided by expert consultants on government from the firm of Griffenhagen & Associates of Chicago.

Newspapermen will be briefed on the plan by the Governor, commission members and Griffenhagen representatives at a conference in the Governor's mansion at 3 p. m. tomorrow. The details will be "off the record."

Senator Burch has indicated the reorganization would effect a "considerable reduction" in the number of State agencies, departments, divisions and bureaus.

The Governor has indicated he may send down a special message dealing with recommendations of a joint Maryland-Virginia fishery study commission that the two States establish a joint authority to control conservation efforts in the Potomac River, the Chesapeake Bay and its tributaries.

Manassas, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Dr. Grover F. Brown, newly installed president of the Nokesville Ruritan Club, has announced appointment of committee chairmen for the coming year. They are Charles Beahm, B. L. Smelker, V. W. Zirkle, Ferris Gue, Roy Fitzwalter, Randolph Cowne, B. R. King, the Rev. Daniel Newman, J. F. Hale, Paul Irvin, Cale Gibson, Carl Kincheloe, Fred Shepherd and C. W. Tomkins.

Leesburg, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—The Rev. Alfred St. John Mathews, rector of Langley parish, McLean, will speak at a teaching mission at St. James Episcopal Church tomorrow and Tuesday at 7:30 o'clock.

Defense May Call Rakeses In Bank Case

Richmond, Va., Jan. 18 (AP).—Hugh N. Rakes, Leesburg dairyman charged with misapplication of $435,000 from a Fredericksburg bank, and his wife, Lillian N. Rakes, may take the stand when their trial in Federal District Court here is resumed tomorrow.

Defense Attorney R. H. McNeill indicated he will call Mrs. Rakes to the stand, and added he might subsequently call Rakes.

Should the dairyman testify, it will be for the first time since the 20-count indictment was filed shortly after the Farmers & Merchants State Bank of Fredericksburg collapsed in January, 1945.

As the tenth day of the retrial of the case closed Friday, Joseph E. Profit, Floyd County bank president, denied knowledge of any irregularities in the account Rakes carried.

Clarence L. Robey collapsed in the courtroom and District Attorney George R. Humrickhouse waived further cross examination.

Group to Fight Sales Tax at Maryland Polls

Annapolis, Md., Jan. 18 (AP).—President Robert I. Black of the Maryland Economic Council said today the council would carry the fight for a State-wide referendum of the sales tax "into the next election for Governor, other State officers and members of the General Assembly."

Yesterday the Anne Arundel County Court denied a petition of four taxpayers, all members of the Economic Council, for an order to force a referendum on the 2 per cent tax at the general election this November.

Judge McWilliams ruled that revenue and appropriation measures are inseparable; therefore, the tax is not subject to referendum under the Maryland constitution.

One of the attorneys for the petitioners, Samuel J. Fisher of Baltimore, said he would have to study Judge McWilliams' decision before advising his clients on taking the case to the Maryland Court of Appeals.

Judge E. Paul Mason in Baltimore last year ruled the measure constitutional.

Meetings Scheduled By Holly Society

Baltimore, Jan. 18 (AP).—The American Holly Society, organized in Baltimore last year, will hold its first meeting here next April and another one in Salisbury next December, C. R. Wolf of Millville, N. J., president, announced today.

Harry W. Dengler, extension forester at the University of Maryland, is vice president of the organization, and Charles A. Young, city forester of Baltimore, is treasurer.

Lutherans to Plan Aid

Winchester, Va., Jan. 18 (Spl.).—Churches composing the Shenandoah Conference of the Lutheran Synod of Virginia will send representatives here next Sunday, when Dr. Paul C. Empie of New York City, assistant executive director of the National Lutheran Conference and director of Lutheran World Action, will speak. Dr. Empie will report on war relief work of Lutherans. Plans will be outlined for a continuing program.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Our Bill Understands Women (It Says Here)

"Maybe you can figure this one out," writes Alice "Sally" Rand of 2059 N. Glebe rd., Arlington, Va.:

It seems that "Sally" was eating at a lunch counter the other day, when a very well-dressed woman took the seat next to hers.

(Leave it to a "Sally" Rand to notice that the other woman was well dressed.)

The newcomer caused great wonderment on both sides of the counter when she ordered "a tuna fish on one piece of bread."

The sandwich man was just as upset by this unusual request as is any waiter who asks, "Coffee?" and is told: "No, nothing to drink." They just can't believe their ears.

And "Sally" was also disturbed, because she couldn't figure out whether the woman next to her was on a diet, or conserving wheat. Women worry about these things.

So "Sally" watched carefully for a clew—and she got it when the well-dressed woman ordered her dessert.

It was a whopping slab of pie, topped with a generous serving of whipped cream—enough to dispel all notions of either diet or food conservation.

So "Sally" went her way wondering why the lady had ordered her sandwich with only one slice of bread. And, drawing on my vast store of knowledge about women, I think I can supply the answer:

She just doesn't like bread.

"THE BIG SLEEP" STARRING UNOWHO

Gerald W. Movius of the Motion Picture Association says that I picked up an oldie from that Wheeling (W. Va.) newspaper ad.

He informs me that the "Washington Slept Here" plaque for the Pentagon was suggested in Bennett Cerf's "Try and Stop Me."

So it appears that somebody else also slept here—and as you movie people would put it, Gerald, "any similarity to columnists living or dead is purely deliberate."

Minnie Upton, 642 A st. ne.; the folks at 1001 S. 26th rd., Arlington, Va.; J. Kerns; "Lou" Parke (plus cash); Mrs. B. W. Brooks, 1207 S. Edgewood st., Arlington, Va.; L. S. Leopold, 5701 Green Tree rd., Bethesda, Md.; Mrs. Grace Wells, Clinton, Md.

Also from Fair and Square Clubber Marian Mackey, 548 N. Pollard st., Arlington, Va., and 8-year-old Ruth Clark, 1302 N. Utah st., Arlington, Va., who found the tokens among her toys. She had been using them for "play money."

Additional tokens were received from R. E. Ritts of 2701 32d st. se., who wrote:

"These will balance the tokens requested by the lady in Portland. It could be my sister, who lives there. She would!"

GIVE-AWAYS

"Spirited black kitten, 7 weeks old." (Metropolitan 2918.)

ANOTHER WAYWARD BUS

The fellows at Capital Transit tell me about a strange coincidence.

On the same day that we ran our "Wayward Bus" item, they were out looking for a wayward bus.

It seems that one of the company's new buses had failed to arrived from the manufacturer on schedule.

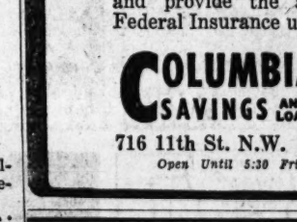
A bit of sleuthing developed the fact that the driver who was delivering it from the factory had been picked up by Fairfax County police, and tossed into the jug on a speeding charge.

So Capital Transit had to send one of its own men out to bring in the wayward bus—and you can bet that he observed all the traffic regulations en route.

THE GHOST SPEAKS

The other day I ran a personal note to Alexandria Kiwanians concerning a speech I'm to make to them on January 22.

Several days after the item appeared, I got a letter from a speech-writing firm which offered to "ghost" my talk at a reasonable fee.



They quote no prices for hour or half-hour speeches, which indicates they don't do much business with Congressmen.

However, 20 minutes worth is listed at $12.50; 15 minutes for $10, and 5 minutes for $5. Which is certainly reasonable enough, considering that talk (like everything else) isn't as cheap as it used to be.

However, the whole idea of a former radio gabber buying a ghosted speech tickles my funnybone. I've got half a notion to buy one.

ADD NAMES

Dave Jernigan of 1620 18th st. nw. reminds us that Igo and Goby are both in Virginia, and adds a little doggerel which has me so confused that I'm sure I'll misquote it. Roughly, it goes like this:

I go by Goby to get to Igo.

Which is almost as bad as Fuzzy Wuzzy wuzza bear, Fuzzy Wuzzy had no hair, Fuzzy Wuzzy wasn't fuzzy, wuz he?

(If you're a true friend of this column, don't send me any similar lines. They drive me to distraction.)

Speaking of Virginia [illegible], Phil Austensen says that the Old Dominion contains both Alpha and Omega—and right now I'm ready to believe it.

ADD SIGNS

G. A. Fisher of 1442 Spring rd. nw. recalls this sign which is displayed at the Bide-A-Wee Inn in the Poconos:

"Rest ye weary bones. Slake ye thirst. Appease ye Appetite. We'll nae rab ye'r packetbook."

WE ARE EIGHT

The mother of octuplets
Glanced proudly at her mate,
And showed her joy at having
A family of eight.

But papa took it calmly
(Which is unlike most males)
While all the children whimpered
And gaily wagged their tails.

The Washington Merry-Go-Round

U.S. of Europe Held Only Solution

By Drew Pearson

Clare Boothe Luce, who can't be accused of being remotely pro-Communist, once diagnosed the USA-USSR tug-of-war as follows:

Pearson

"In the early part of the last century, the United States was a young, rebel republic. We had a new political idea. Everybody wanted to imitate us.

"Today, Russia has come along with a newer political idea and assumed the political leadership of Europe. We've got to get that leadership beak."

Phony as the Communist political leadership is, Clare Luce is right. The Soviet ideology is new, has been sold with great cleverness and has bamboozled a good many people. Furthermore, it has sold Europe on at least one idea which is definitely worth while, and which, without the Communist taint, could be the solution of the European imbroglio.

After World War I, I spent considerable time in the Balkans. At that time the hate between the peoples of that area was beyond belief. To illustrate: I once tried to work out a deal whereby the broken-down locomotives of Yugoslavia would be repaired in the idle machine shops of Austria in return for Yugoslav corn. Vienna was then starving. Corn in Yugoslavia was rotting. However, the Yugoslav government said they would rather have no trains at all then feed the hated Austrians.

In no part of southern Europe was this hatred worse than between the Italians and Yugoslavs around Trieste and Fiume.

Two weeks ago I revisited this part of Europe. There are still a great many Italians along the Yugoslav border who hate the Yugoslavs and vice versa. However, I was amazed to find that Tito and the Communists had been able to make an appreciable change.

They have been able to convince a surprising number of Italians and Yugoslavs that they should live and work together peaceably—provided, of course, they lived and worked under Communist rule. I was almost amazed to find that in northern Italy where the Communists control about 50 per cent of the local governments, it is bad political medicine to criticize Tito.

In other words, the Communists, by some of the shrewdest propaganda in the world, have managed to wipe out at least some of the age-old hatred between these countries. They are also making progress toward Moscow's plan for a United States of the Balkans, which would unite Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Romania, Albania and the new independent so-called republic of Greece.

No matter what you may think of Tito, it remains a fact that economically this part of the world was much better off when its diverse resources were pooled under the old Austro-Hungarian Empire. If they are pooled again today under Tito, they might also be better off economically. Politically, it's a horse of a different color. Furthermore, a United States of the Balkans would be a powerful and embarrassing weapon against the USA in our attempt to keep Greece out of Soviet hands.

All of this boils down to the fact that the gentlemen in the Kremlin have been smart enough to steal the best political weapon the United States of America has—namely, the United States of Europe.

At this point the Marshall Plan comes in. Whether the Chicago Tribune likes it or not, the Marshal Plan has been the most powerful roadblock so far in the westward sweep of communism. It has given Moscow a definite setback in France and Italy and sent the Politburo scurrying around to find new victories in Greece, Austria and perhaps Czechoslovakia.

The Marshall Plan has given great encouragement to a democratic western Europe. But the big question is: Does it go far enough? Will the Marshall Plan be merely a temporary stopgap? Will it carry Europe definitely over the reconstruction hump and put her permanently back on her feet?

My own conclusion is that it does not go far enough, and that Europe will never get permanently back on her feet until the artificial barriers which break Europe up into petty pools of potential hate are flattened out. In other words, there has got to be a United States of Europe.

And the biggest mistake made by the Marshall planners—though not an irreparable one—was not to tie up the United States of Europe with the Marshall Plan.

There is still time to do this. Already France and Italy have started to discuss tariff barriers and mutual economic problems. France, for instance, needs labor. Italy, on the other hand, has heavy unemployment. Therefore, France plans to use some of this Italian labor.

However, these two countries alone cannot build a United States of Europe. Furthermore, European prejudice is deep-rooted. It will take astute and forceful statesmanship from the outside to build a United States of Europe. In his Harvard speech General Marshall has already laid the foundation for such a union, but he will have to go a lot further.

Obviously the first step is a United States of Western Europe which would include such countries as France, Italy, Belgium, The Netherlands, the Scandinavian countries, Switzerland and so on. Once this is organized, the chances are strong that, one by one, the countries on the edge of the iron curtain—Czechoslovakia, Austria, Poland—soon would start veering over to the United States of Western Europe.

The trouble with the United States of America is that though it has built up the most successful and powerful federal union in history, it has hid its light under a bushel. Our most convincing selling argument in the world is to point to our own success, instead, we have let Moscow steal our thunder and start organizing a United States of the Balkans.

Almost every European is a potential American. His dream is to migrate to the United States. The problem is to convert him into an American without actually transporting him across the Atlantic.

The problem is not an easy one. But by using the tremendous reservoir of good will we have in Europe, by using the Marshall Plan, and by using a lot more American salesmanship to build a United States of Europe, it can be done.

They do not try

Some people want to rise to fame . . . And gather riches too . . . And yet they will not sacrifice . . . To make their dreams come true . . . They either figure they are smart . . . And do not have to try . . . Or else they think in wishful terms . . . And merely sit and sigh . . . And so they go along in life . . . And wait from day to day . . . For praise and recognition and . . . For wealth to come their way . . . And when their idle hands and hearts . . . Do not attain success . . . They feel that they have been denied . . . Their rightful happiness . . . But they are neither willing nor . . . Prepared at all to do . . . Whatever effort it may take . . . To see their struggle through.

THE HECHT COMPANY SALUTES THE CITIZENS OF WASHINGTON WHOSE HOMES ARE IN

UTAH . . . the beehive state

On July 24 of last year, we commemorated the Centennial of the founding of Utah . . . one hundred years of Progress and Achievement . . . according to the basic principles of human activity laid down by Brigham Young. When he saw Utah spread before him in her natural splendor . . . the leader confidently proclaimed, "This is the Place" . . . the promised land for which his people had been searching. They called their new home Deseret . . . meaning land of the honeybee; today the nickname of "Beehive" applied to our State is an apt description of the industrious habits of our people. Through their own efforts and industry, the early settlers of Utah turned arid land into fertile farming areas. Our towering mountains are repositories of vast stocks of minerals . . . many of which are being utilized in the expansion of Utah industry . . . and there are other enormous reserves for future consumption. This Beehive of industry and agriculture has a setting of superlative beauty. Our largest metropolis, Salt Lake City, is surrounded on all sides by natural phenomena . . . the Great Salt Lake . . . the "Great American Desert" . . . the spectacular canyon area . . . and the towering Wasatch Mountains. Education and knowledge have always been cherished by Utahans . . . today statistics show that Utah maintains a very high ratio of literacy. Indeed, the graduate schools in the District have attracted many of our number in the Utah State Society. We are justifiably proud of our hundred years of achievement . . . and we welcome this opportunity so generously afforded us by The Hecht Company to pledge to the Nation many, many more years of continued contributions . . . according to the best of our ability . . . and directed to economic and cultural progress and the furtherance of democratic principles in America and throughout the world.

President, Utah State Society

● UTAH . . . Celebrated her Centennial last summer. One hundred years before, Brigham Young, one of America's great colonizers, and his little band of 147 men, women and children . . . settled down in what is now Utah . . . but which they first called Deseret. Beset with perils and hardships . . . they blazed a 1,000-mile trail from the Missouri River . . . across the wind-swept prairie and over the mountains. On July 24, 1847, they reached their destination . . . the land surrounding the Great Salt Lake . . . where they might live according to their own beliefs.

● UTAH . . . Whose founders were among the first to develop large-scale irrigation projects in America . . . and transform barren desert lands into fertile productive valleys. Today more than 1,300,000 acres of rich agricultural land are under irrigation in the State. Her main agricultural products include sugar beets, potatoes, hay, onions, alfalfa seed and wheat. The State also is the center of a thriving livestock industry.

● UTAH . . . Where mining is the leading industry. Utah is one of the top States in the country in gold production . . . and ranks high in copper, lead and silver. One-seventh of the area of Utah is underlaid with coal. The Utah Copper Mine is frequently referred to as the largest open pit copper mine in the Nation. Its giant electric shovels are figuratively cutting down mountains . . . to produce about one-third of America's copper.

● UTAH . . . Refines a diversity of products. The State is a leading smelter of non-ferrous metals and steel. The 200-million-dollar steel plant erected at Geneva during the war is a big factor in fostering Utah's peacetime industrial activities. Sugar and salt refining are also major industries. The waters of the Great Salt Lake furnish an almost inexhaustible supply of raw salt.

● UTAH . . . Whose capital, Salt Lake City, is a commercial and industrial center of the inter-mountain States . . . and one of the country's most picturesque cities . . . in a beautiful setting at the foot of the Wasatch Mountains. Temple Square is the site of the granite Mormon Temple, forty years in the making . . . the Tabernacle, which seats 8,000 people and has a pipe organ world-famous for its tonal quality, enhanced by the remarkable acoustics of the Tabernacle . . . the Assembly Hall . . . the Museum . . . and monuments dedicated to the Founders.

● UTAH . . . Land of scenic splendor. On her Western side lies the "Great American Desert." In the Southeast is the canyon country . . . a labyrinth of deep twisting gorges . . . weird rock formations . . . and the largest natural bridges in the world. The Zion and Bryce Canyon National Parks and Cedar Breaks National Monument are located in this region. Centuries of geological history are depicted on these canyon walls.

● UTAH . . . Proud of her natural wonder, the Great Salt Lake, one of the largest inland bodies of salt water in the world. The Lake, which is 4218 feet above sea level, covers 2360 square miles . . . and has no known outlet. It has a salt content said to be several times that of the oceans. Utah is also the site of the Bonneville Salt Flats, one of the world's fastest automobile speedways . . . where many of the world's auto speed records have been set.

● UTAH . . . A cultural center of the West. Her best-known colleges are the University of Utah, established as the University of Deseret only three years after the arrival of the Pioneers . . . the State Agricultural College . . . and Brigham Young University. Utah is famed in musical circles for the splen[illegible] Tabernacle Choir and the Utah State Symphony Orchestra.
